New Road's Cost Held Only Block To Airport Peace

2 Public Hearings Are Slated Today

Capital Service to End, Threat Advanced by Eastern Concern.

Amicable settlement of the controversy over the proposed closing of Military road adjacent to the Washington Airport appeared likely yesterday on the eve of two Congressional hearings as two airline companies serving the Capital prepared to transfer operations to Baltimore's municipal airport, if necessary.

Apparently, the only question at issue to save the Washington Airport from being closed February 15 by the Department of Commerce was whether the airport owners would compensate Arlington County for a strip of Military road so as to pay the cost of building a substitute highway.

With the Senate and House Military Affairs Committees scheduled to hold public hearings this morning in a hurried attempt to reconcile all factions on pending legislation, developments yesterday came rapidly. They were:

Developments of Day.

Officials of the Central and American Airlines flew to Baltimore to inspect Logan Field, with the aim of making arrangements to use this field instead of Washington Airport after February 15, if the local airport is closed.

Eastern Airlines will quit its service into Washington unless the road is closed, said Paul H. Brattain, general traffic manager. "If the road is closed," he said, "it will only be a temporary expedient and work must be started upon some permanent site."

The Arlington County board agreed to withdraw its oppsition to the closing of Military road, provided the War Department quitclaims it to the county for use in bargaining with the owners of the airport.

Samuel J. Solomon, airport manager, told the Senate District Committee and the Arlington board that his company would be willing to buy the property from Arlington as a strip of real estate, but would not build a substitute road.

Identical Bills Offered.

Identical bills were introduced in the House and the Senate by Representative McSwain (Democrat), South Carolina, and Senator McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, authorizing the Secretary of War to close the road and to lease the portion adjacent to the airport to the airport owners and to quitclaim the remainder to Arlington County, the State of Virginia or to a Federal agency.

The Senate District Committee, after hearing several witnesses, decided to ask the House for an immediate conference on the bill left in conference last year to set up a commission for the selection of a permanent site for a District airport.

Both the House and Senate Military Affairs Committees will meet in special sessions this morning to act upon the bills, but the House committee plans the more elaborate hearing with representatives of the War, Postoffice and Commerce Departments and others in attendance.

Chairman McSwain expressed a willingness to amend his resolution to quit-claim the entire roadway to Arlington County under the agreement between the county board and Solomon, providing a definite stipulation is obtained as to the transfer, so there will be no slip in the plan to close the highway before February 15.

Freeland Chew, of the Arlington board, told the Senate committee that Arlington expected to sell the road, if and when obtained, to the airport owners for enough money to construct a substitute highway. He said he had no estimates as to the cost.

New Snowfall Blankets City; Airplane Down

Death Here Is Blamed on Exposure; Cold Wave Sweeps Nation.

Washington, after two days of comparatively benign weather, was being bombarded with snow again this morning, and more was in sight.

From nearly all parts of the country came accounts of severe and, in some cases, dangerous weather. A gale was developing off the North Carolina coast below Cape Hatteras and moving northeastward.

Plane Down in Florida.

A dispatch from Pensacola, Fla., told of an Eastern Airlines plane, New York-bound from Miami, landing on an unlighted field near there with four passengers and a crew of four, after flying blind in a heavy storm.

Six hours after he had taken his northbound luxury liner off, Pilot Freddie Cann, of Miami, brought her down safely at Pensacola.

He had flown north to Charleston, where he could not land. He turned back to Jacksonville and found conditions as bad. Then, with his radio beacon failing and gasoline running low, he swung across the Florida peninsula and came down safely at the naval air base in Pensacola.

The weather bureau at Montgomery, Ala., warned of possible serious floods in Alabama and Georgia rivers as snow, sleet and rain began falling again.

It was announced at the headquarters here of the United Mine Workers of America that Illinois miners will be allowed to work today to help alleviate the coal shortage in that State. Later, it was said, they would have to shorten their working hours to balance the 35-hour week allotted to each pit worker.

Death Blamed on Cold.

The temperature in the Washington area, the Weather Bureau said last night, is not expected to change greatly in the next two days.

The high temperature recording for the District was registered at 3 p. m., with a reading of 34. Low temperature was 20 degrees, at 8 a. m.

One death from the severe cold spell occurred yesterday in Gallinger Hospital, when an unidentified colored man died from exposure. He was found a week ago in a Bladensburg brickyard.

Falls on the ice sent three persons to hospitals. Claude Wykoff, 48, of 1101 Fifteenth street northwest, was treated for a head injury. William Knowles, 70, of 1403 Girard

Powers Plan Steps to Balk War Abroad

Conference Agreed Upon to Adopt Measures to Insure Peace.

France, Britain Decide to Include Germany in Parley, Is Report.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Paris, Feb. 6.—A conference of European powers will be held shortly, probably in London, in an effort to reach agreements to prevent war.

The French and British governments reached an agreement today to include Germany in a discussion of major European problems, it was learned on highest authority here, although London officials professed to have no knowledge of such an agreement.

It was understood that the conference most likely would be called under the pretext of dealing with naval questions, but that its scope would be much wider than that, embracing these purposes:

1. To avoid giving Germany the feeling that she has been isolated by the recent discussions of various powers in Paris, in which the Reich was not included.

2. To prevent Germany from making some gesture likely to endanger peace, such as military occupation of the forbidden Rhineland zone.

3. Possible re-distribution of raw materials as well as the settlement of matters in dispute in Europe.

4. Possible discussion of re-distribution of colonial mandates and possessions—exceedingly sore spots with Germany and Italy.

It was understood that in deciding on the conference, France agreed to waive any protest against Bratain's desire to invite Germany to join the London naval conference. France has objected that such an invitation would sanction German naval re-armament, already well under way, which France has persistently refused to recognize.

Additional credence was given the reported plan in diplomatic circle, as it dovetails with the general belief Anglo-German relations have been benefited by the accession of King Edward VIII to the British throne.

Austria Fears Moscow.

Paris, Feb. 6 (AP).—Austrian and Yugoslavian fears slowed up diplomatic conversations pointed toward replacement of Italy by Russia as a guarantor of central European peace today.

Official sources said Pierre-Etienne Flandin, French foreign minister, found the Austrians fearful that Moscow would revive the power of Vienna Socialists if given the position now held by the Fascists in guaranteeing Austria's independence.

The French foreign minister also was informed, officials declared, the Yugoslavs feared the Italian army if Premier Mussolini is driven into an alliance with Reichsfuehrer Hitler as a result of re-alignment of diplomatic ties.

Informed circles, following the conferences of monarchs and statesmen, saw three tangible results from the discussions.

The first was described as Austria's willingness to postpone restoration of the Hapsburg monarchy in compensation for economic agreements with Yugoslavia, Rumania and Czechoslovakia.

Unanimous agreement the League of Nations should be strengthened was reported as the second result of the lengthy conferences.

The third decision concerned the promise of King Carol of Rumania to resist Nazi advances, these sources declared.

France to Increase Fleet.

Paris, Feb. 6 (U.P.).—France hopes this year to complete the most powerful submarine fleet the world ever has seen to keep pace with rebirth of German naval strength, it was learned today.

The 1936 naval construction program, now being drafted by experts of the navy and finance ministries, envisages a submarine fleet of 100 vessels, designed to guard the North Sea, Atlantic and Mediterranean coasts.

France's present under-sea strength is given officially as 80 submarines, including 9 over age.

Is Hamlet 'to Be or Not to Be'? 'Disarmament' Court to Decide

Like Other Great Dane, Brooding Prince, 180-Pound Dog Is Accused of Villainous Designs on Others of Canine Family.

By Edward T. Folliard.

Hamlet, a Great Dane weighing 180 pounds, was, of course, named by his owners, Mr. and Mrs. W. Forbes Morgan, of 2320 Massachusetts avenue northwest, for Shakespeare's gloomy Danish prince.

Yesterday, 19 prominent neighbors of the Morgans sought to carry the parallel further. Shakespeare's Hamlet, after soliloquizing a lot, finally stabbed King Claudius. Mr. Morgan's neighbors yesterday complained that Hamlet, the dog, was making pinlards of his teeth and rendering life unbearable for smaller dogs not so well armamented.

They petitioned Assistant Corporation Counsel James W. Lauderdale that Hamlet be restrained. He will decide in a few days whether it is to be or not to be.

Hamlet was not without friends in court. A dozen or so persons, including fashionably attired society women, butlers and grocery boys, testified the pony-size dog was a gentle pet, who, if called upon, would make a good guardian for babies.

There were three defense attorneys in Hamlet's corner, among them Joseph P. Tumulty, once secretary to President Woodrow Wilson.

Mrs. Lucian B. Boggs, one of the complainants living in the apartment house at 2540 Massachusetts avenue, presented the most damaging case against Hamlet. On the morning of September 19, she said, she was out for a walk with her mother's two small dogs.

"I had been warned of the Great Dane's viciousness," she said. "When I saw him coming along the street, I picked up my dogs.

"The Great Dane jumped on me. He knocked me down and the small dogs ran. The big dog bit one on the back, picked him and shook him. I was very much upset and frightened."

She said she had heard many

Strike at Pekin Ends as Town Defies Unions

Police Chief Ouster Fails; Business Is Resumed by Merchants.

By the Associated Press.

Pekin, Ill., Feb. 6.—Life suddenly surged back to normal in this strike-torn community today after a dramatic sequence of events terminated the city-wide shut-down enforced by organized labor.

Members of the Trades and Labor Assembly—de facto rulers of a city of 17,000 persons for 22 hours—ended the paralyzing general holiday they had proclaimed in an effort to force the dismissal of Chief of Police Harry Donahue.

Business Leaders Act.

Their action followed adoption of aggressive tactics by the town's business leaders. Two hundred banded together and announced they would defy the Unionist Junta by re-opening their establishments tomorrow.

A conference of labor chieftains was called. It ended in their formal announcement that the widespread moratorium on virtually all phases of commercial activity had been lifted.

"This is a clear-cut victory for the forces that have been trying to preserve order," declared Mayor W. E. Schurman. "It should preclude any attempt at similar movements in other cities."

The welcome word "the holiday is over" swept through Pekin with amazing speed. Restaurants, stores, barber shops, groceries, markets, movie houses, beauty parlors, taverns and other places flung open doors that had closed at 3 p. m. Wednesday when groups of strikers warned proprietors to close up or have their windows smashed.

Officers and Pickets Clash.

Vehicles bearing food and fuel moved through the streets. Beer trucks trundled by. Coal and provender supplies which had dwindled toward the privation line were quickly replenished. The transient population sat down again to substantial fare.

Recession of the stand taken by labor chieftains followed a conference with William Schoenberg, an American Federation of Labor organizer from Chicago. They stated they had terminated the holiday after they had been informed by State Labor Director Martin Durkin that the American Distillery Co. had agreed to keep its plant shut down and to continue parleys with union representatives with the intent of settling a strike at that plant.

The strike there started January 19, when 100 union workers walked out. The plant closed January 22. An attempt to reopen it last Mon-

U. S. Team Gets Cool Reception At '36 Olympics

Other Entries Are Cheered, But Silence Greets Americans.

By the United Press.

Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany, Feb. 6.—The fourth winter Olympic games were proclaimed open today by Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler before the largest crowd in history.

While a swirling snowstorm blanketed these twin Christmas-card villages, Hitler stood bare-headed on the balcony of honor before 80,000 spectators in Garmisch ski stadium, and spoke the words which made Germany host to the international games for the first time since their revival in 1896.

"I declare the fourth winter Olympic games of 1936 at Garmisch-Partenkirchen as opened," the Reichsfuehrer, dressed in his favorite brown uniform, proclaimed.

Athletes from 28 nations, standing in a semi-circle facing the stands, then took the Olympic oath and the 11 days of snow and ice competition were on.

U. S. Hockey Victor.

The first event of the 1936 Olympic program was a victory for America. The United States hockey team scored a 1-0 victory over Germany and form continued to run true when Canada defeated Poland's hockey team, 5 to 1. With snow continuing to fall and mar the play, Sweden defeated Japan, 2 to 0.

The colorful ceremony began when Hitler entered the balcony of honor, surrounded by Nazi Party chieftains. A hush fell over the crowd which filled the stadium, located just above the town of Garmisch at the foot of the towering Bavarian Alps.

The heavy snowfall dimmed the colors of rival flags and bright winter sports uniforms, making the setting even more picturesque as the assembled bands blared "Deutschland Uber Alles" and "Horst Wessel," the official Nazi anthem.

Cheers Echo.

Three "Sieg Heils" (Nazi cheers) echoed from 80,000 throats as the 1,061 athletes began their colorful march into the stadium, headed by Greece, mother of the Olympic ideal.

The greatest salvo greeted the Austrian team, wearing green coats, short breeches and befeathered caps. Norway, with smiling Sonja Henie, world's greatest figure skater, leading the way, was enthusiastically received. So were Japan, France and Great Britain.

But there were no cheers when the American team, in twenty-

Senate Gets AAA Control Substitute Act

Passing of Half-Billion Farm Aid Measure Held Certain.

Kansan Presents Alternative Republican Plan in House.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Administration's $500,000,000 AAA substitute, patched with last-minute revisions, but headed toward old AAA objectives of farm-production control, was launched on its course through Congress yesterday in a choppy sea of Senate debate.

Majority opposition to "dubious" constitutional features already had crumbled, smoothed out by concessions to States' rights, and only a scattering of vigorous Republican criticism barred its certain route to passage.

Minority Leader Charles L. McNary led the attack, picking legal flaws in its framework, and finally admonishing:

"Let's not fool ourselves, because you can't fool the courts, and you can't fool the farmers. You have fooled them too often now."

Repealer Speeded.

A few minutes earlier, a Congressional repealer of cotton, tobacco and potato control laws, already doomed by the Supreme Court AAA decision, was sped to the White House, sweeping the slate clean for the latest Administrative substitute.

On the other side of Capitol, the first definite Republican alternative, incorporating many views of Gov. Alf Landon, of Kansas, was unfolded to the House by Representative Clifford R. Hope, of Kansas, ranking minority member of the House Agriculture Committee.

Hope proposed giving producers of surplus farm crops (wheat, cotton, hogs and tobacco) an equivalent for tariff protection they do not receive, developing and maintaining the home market for American farmers, and developing foreign markets for American farm surpluses.

"There are other things which are desirable, soil conservation, co-operative marketing, market agreements," Hope said. "All of them have their proper place. They are provided for in existing legislation."

Soil Erosion Control.

The bill before the Senate is constructed on a soil-erosion control framework, although other broad purposes are set forward as well. It provides for a two-year "temporary" plan, in which the Federal Government would dominate the farm control picture, but would permit the States to receive Federal grants if they come in with their own approved plans.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, joined Senator McNary in his assault on the bill, both stressing the lack of a "yardstick" for Federal payments to farmers, and the failure to place any limit on amounts the Secretary of Agriculture might spend.

At least one of their shafts struck home with the Democrats. An amendment will be offered, with majority support, to delimit the Secretary's drafts on the Treasury for benefit payments, it was learned last night.

Constitutional Doubts.

To Senator Ellison D. Smith, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, who recently avowed his constitutional doubts on the bill, but yesterday asserted they had been overcome, fell the lot of defending the bill.

"This is a soil erosion and conservation bill, and I don't think anyone will question its legality," Smith asserted, grinning broadly. Recalling his promise not to bring anything back to the Senate but a constitutional measure, Republicans laughed loudly.

"The object of this bill," Smith repeated, "is preservation of the soil. Members of this Senate ought to see to it that the farmers of this country have consideration above all vocations and avocations."

Roosevelt Studies Bill to Levy Taxes Of $500,000,000

Leaders Believe Imposts to Pay Bonus Costs Are Improbable.

President Seeks Slash in Expenses

Cut in Cost of Bureaus' Operation Believed His Object.

A $500,000,000 tax bill to replace lost AAA revenues is being studied at the White House, with the probability that no new taxes will be asked to meet the bonus demand on the Treasury, Congressional leaders indicated last night.

Representative Robert L. Doughton, North Carolina Democrat, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, and House Majority Leader William Bankhead, Alabama Democrat, stated yesterday after a conference with the President that the new tax bill will not be "staggering."

However, new revenues may be sought to meet the tremendous cost of the relief-and-unemployment program, which, if carried out on the present scale, will require a total of more than $2,000,000,000.

Chairman Sabath (Democrat), Illinois, of the House Steering Committee, last night said the group had agreed in secret session to go on record as opposed to new taxation for paying the bonus, adding:

"We understand the President has evolved a scheme by which he could find the money somewhere else."

Sabath said he thought that plan might be tied up with current attempts of the President to chop down Federal expenditures or that it might call for a ten-year bonus amortization plan.

In the meantime, the President continued study of methods by which Federal expenditures can be curtailed sharply. Last week he cancelled approximately $1,000,000,000 in loan authorizations to various Government agencies.

Conferees Silent.

Yesterday he met with heads of the spending agencies of the Government for a prolonged 2¼-hour conference. All emerged tight-lipped.

Present at the conference were Secretary of the Interior Ickes, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Acting Director of the Budget Daniel Bell, Lyle T. Alverson, acting director of the National Emergency Council; Aubrey Williams, assistant WPA administrator and executive director of the National Youth Administration, and Rexford G. Tugwell, Resettlement Administrator. Harry L. Hopkins, WPA Administrator, was ill and unable to be present.

Chairman Doughton said that the new bill which would be presented to his committee would be largely confined to farm taxes. Estimates show that $440,000,000 will be needed for this purpose. He added that he did not know what other additional items would be provided for, but was definite that there would be no provision for bonus taxes.

Speculation centered on the outcome of the President's study of agency - curtailment possibilities. Observers noted that the President, in his recent series of conferences with the heads of the leading agencies, the heads of the spending agencies, and his financial advisors, has evidently been securing a clear picture of the whole immediate financial set-up of the Government in line with the heavy demands made on it by the bonus payments to come, the loss of the processing taxes, and the ever-pressing relief-and-unemployment load.

His directions may be embodied in a Presidential message to Congress, it was believed, rather than in a letter to the Ways and Means Committee.

Chairman Doughton stressed the expected savings from Government retrenchment, stating that the Administration must yet figure out how much new revenues will be needed.

He said that the farm taxes will be actually substitute taxes and not new revenues since they will supplant a past tax.

Hopes Bonus Tax Is Out.

He added:

"I am hopeful that there will be no financing of the bonus proposed in the taxes now under consideration. The committee will not do anything until they tell us definitely what they want."

He added that he looked for an "equitable" tax bill and hoped "that the taxes would be neither excessive nor burdensome."

In connection with the study

REPRESENTATIVE SCOTT.

Teachers' Oath ParodyPlanned By Rep. Scott

By James D. Secrest.

If Washington school teachers think they are restricted by the anti-communism rider on the District appropriations act, they haven't seen anything yet.

Representative Scott (Democrat), of California, dapper ex-school teacher, who has voluntarily assumed the role of baiting the "red baiters" in the House, yesterday warned that he is going to offer an amendment to the 1937 District bill as a parody on teachers' oath measures.

Text of Contract.

"I promise to take a vital interest in all phases of Sunday school work, donating of my time, service and money without stint, for the benefit and uplift of the community.

"I promise to abstain from all dancing, immodest dressing, and any other conduct unbecoming a teacher and a lady.

"I promise not to go out with any young man, except in so far as it may be necessary to stimulate Sunday school work.

"I promise not to fall in love, to

Mrs. Harriman Pays Speeding Fine of $5

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Washington social leader, chairman of the Traffic Safety Council of the American Automobile Association, was fined $5 for speeding yesterday in Traffic Court, and had to borrow $2 from the arresting policeman to pay the fine.

Mrs. Harriman was arrested by Policeman R. T. Conklin, of the Traffic Division, January 24. Conklin said she was driving 32 miles an hour, in a 22-mile zone on Constitution avenue northwest.

Pleading guilty when arraigned before Judge Walter J. Casey, Mrs. Harriman was fined $5 on the speeding charge. The court suspended sentence on a charge of driving on an expired permit She borrowed $2 from Conklin, and later reimbursed him with her personal check.

Originally scheduled for January 25, the case against Mrs. Harriman was continued when Conklin was injured in a collision on his way to court, and could not testify.

Nazis Demand Whole of Jewry 'Stand Trial' in Gustloff Slaying

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Feb. 6.—Nazi Jew baiters today demanded that the Jewish race "stand trial" for the assassination in Switzerland two days ago of Wilhelm Gustloff, Nazi leader. He was slain by David Frankfurter, a Jew.

Orderly protest meetings were held in cities throughout Germany, but the government attempted to forestall any anti-Semitic rioting, because the Olympic games are just opening in this country.

Nazis of Baden assembled at Waldshut, on the Swiss frontier, where Premier Walter Koehler protested the slaying "in the name of all Germans."

Berlin's Kurfuerstendam area, scene of anti-Jewish riots last July, was quiet despite the fresh anti-Semitic wave. Few Jews were seen in the streets, and Jewish cafes had fewer customers.

The newspaper, Franklische Zeitung, owned by Julius Streicher, leading Nazi anti-Semite, asserted "An individual cannot be accused in this murder case. The whole Jewish race must be brought before the court, for Frankfurter acted for his race."

The Jewish Telegraphic Agency said Streicher's newspaper declared the slaying was "another in a long list of Jewish ritual murders."

(The dispatch added that the paper said the slaughter of Gentiles by Jews began a thousand years ago, and now was celebrated by the Feast of Purim—which commemorates the deliverance of the Jews from a massacre plotted against them by Haman in the time of the Persian King Artaxerxes.

(The Central Union of Jews in Germany issued a statement condemning Frankfurther's act, the agency reported.)

Berne, Switzerland, Feb. 6 (AP).—The Swiss government today disputed the contention of the German government that the assassination of Wilhelm Gustloff, Nazi organizer, resulted from anti-Nazi attacks in newspapers.

13 in Senate, 100 in the House Will Get $100,000 From Bonus

By the Associated Press.

Senators and members of the House will get more than $100,000 from the bonus, a check-up yesterday disclosed, but most of them will wait until 1945 to collect.

Thirteen Senators and more than 100 Representatives hold bonus certificates. There are 147 World War veterans in Congress, but some of them are not entitled to the bonus because they were not in the service long enough, or held commissions of major or higher.

All of the 13 Senators intend to hold on to their certificates or turn them in for bonds, but will not cash them now. Inquiries as to what they would do with the money disclosed that several will use it to send children to school, one plans to buy a farm, and many have not decided.

The Senator holding the biggest certificate is probably Senator Minton (Democrat), Indiana. His has a face value of $1,583, almost the limit under the law.

The other bonus holders in the Senate are Stelwer (Republican), Oregon; Tydings (Democrat), Maryland; Clark (Democrat), Missouri; Black (Democrat), Alabama; Maloney (Democrat), Connecticut; Burke (Democrat), Nebraska; Connally (Democrat), Texas; Gibson, (Republican), Vermont; Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington, and Duff (Democrat), Wisconsin.

Most House members reached said they also intended to hold their certificates, but Representative Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, holding one of the largest in the House, said he was going to cash his immediately.

"I have a little 8-year-old girl," Connery said. "I am going to turn mine in for cash and put it in the bank, where it will draw compound interest for her, instead of the 3 per cent offered by the Government."

A check-up showed most of the bonus holders voted for the bill recently passed over President Roosevelt's veto for immediate payment of the certificates.

Roosevelt Due For Vote Upset, Norris Asserts

Party Lines Broken as Both Factions Fight for Delegates.

Party lines were torn in bitterness yesterday as Democrat denounced Democrat and Republican factions strove for advantage in the pre-convention struggle for delegates.

A hanging in effigy, a call for currency stabilization and a demand that the system of appointing postmasters be revised all added color to the political developments of the day.

These included:

Senator Norris, Independent Republican, of Nebraska, and Roosevelt supporter, predicted that the President will lose "millions of votes" in November because of the system of appointing postmasters, and said "one word" from the Executive could change the system.

Jouett Shouse, president of the American Liberty League, declared that at least 2,000,000 Democrats are in the mood "to take a walk," as Alfred E. Smith threatened to do, and support a Republican.

Col. Frank Knox, Republican Chicago publisher, withheld announcement on whether he would compete with Senator William E. Borah for Ohio's delegates to the Cleveland convention. He confined himself to a denunciation of the Administration's monetary policies.

Smith Ranged in Effigy.

Senator Lester J. Dickinson, of Iowa, speaking at Columbus, Ohio, accused the President of "vindictiveness" and "intolerance," and urged the sending of unpledged delegates to the Republican convention.

And Al Smith was hanged in effigy at Coulee Dam, Washington State, by a band of men who said they resented his attack on the "New Deal."

Senator Norris renewed his fight on Postmaster General Farley without mentioning Farley by name. He declared that "a man managing a campaign ought not to be Postmaster General," but made it clear that he would support Mr. Roosevelt for re-election. The President some months ago urged Nebraska voters to keep Norris in the Senate as long as he lives.

"Many members of the Democratic Party will go down to defeat because they had too many postmasters to appoint," Norris said. "* * * For the benefit of the members of Congress, we ought to relieve them of this duty and give our country a system that has nothing to do with politics."

He declared "it would be better entirely to eliminate the Postoffice Department from politics; it would not only save members of the House a lot of work, but an untold amount of embarrassment."

Second Examination Held.

His remarks were occasioned by consideration of the nomination of Mrs. Maude S. Yancey as postmaster at Cody, Nebr. The Nebraskan said that Mrs. Yancey failed in the civil service examination to select eligibles for the position, but that "political authorities" brought about another examination, from which Mrs. Yancey, "who had been to school at Government expense" in the interim, was ranked as eligible, though "at the bottom of the list."

Chairman McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, of the Postoffice Committee, and Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, and former first assistant to Farley, defended the present system of selection. The former declared that "we get infinitely better postmasters by having Congressmen appoint them than by having someone in Washington select them."

Shouse, speaking before the Chicago Bondmen's Club, on "Shall the Supreme Court Be Plowed Under?" reiterated that the New Deal had violated the 1932 platform and the "Bill of Rights," and declared:

"If the Roosevelt Administration proposes to attempt to change the Constitution of the United States, if it proposes to 'plow under' the Supreme Court, it must present its proposition to the American people openly and fairly, because America will not again permit the attempt to accomplish such purpose by deceit and subversion."

Shouse welcomed the killing of NRA and AAA by the Supreme Court and characterized as "astounding and appalling" two recent assertions by Secretary Wallace. One was when the Cabinet member called the refunding of impounded processing taxes "the greatest legalized steal in history," and the other that "'Constitutional' is one thing and passing the Supreme Court is another."

"Either Secretary Wallace, in his blazing wrath and his sneering references to the Supreme Court, represented and voiced the views of Mr. Roosevelt," Shouse said, "or else he should be publicly rebuked by Mr. Roosevelt."

He said that articles in the Bill of Rights threatened by the New Deal were freedom of the press, the prohibition of "unreasonable searches and seizures," and of depriving of "life, liberty or property without due process of law," the reservation for the people of rights not specifically granted the Federal Government, and "States' rights."

Earlier, in an interview, Shouse told the Associated Press that by nominating "a first-class man" on a "wise and proper platform without any pussy-footing," the Republicans "can cleave the Democratic Party in historic fashion."

Knox Refuses to Talk.

The expected announcement from Col. Knox that he would battle with Senator Borah for Ohio's 52 Republican delegates was not forthcoming after Knox conferred with advisers at Cincinnati. "I am not going to jump off the deep end. There will be no announcement today," he said. After addressing a congress of life underwriters there, he left on an Eastern speaking trip.

He criticized Government financing as issuing "paper bonds, payable in paper dollars, used to create paper credits which are drawn upon the Treasury in the form of paper checks."

"The thing to do is to stabilize," he said. "I don't know just why the dollar was devalued to 59 cents, and I don't think anybody else really knows. But now that it has been cut to that figure, and has been held for some time at that figure, I am in favor of leaving it at that figure, because we have already partially adjusted ourselves to that figure, and to begin more tinkering now, whether up or down, would only cause fresh perturbations, new uncertainties."

Richberg's NRA Epilogue Indicates Slow Progress in Government Control of Industry.

By Franklyn Waltman

PUBLICATION today of "The Rainbow," Donald R. Richberg's epilogue on the ill-fated NRA, again directs attention to the fact that little progress has been made toward the generation-old problem of making our industrial system serve more adequately the needs of the entire country.

Congress talks about the problem, but does little. Politicians rant against monopolies, but fail to point out how the big, grasping enterprise can be restricted without inflicting ruin on the business striving to make both ends meet. Economists condemn unbridled competition, but fail to show how it can be eliminated without destruction of the competitive system.

Discussion of the problem has been particularly active within the last few days. Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, made a Nation-wide broadcast, pleading for support of his bill requiring corporations to be chartered by the Federal Government. He would require corporate bodies seeking such charters to agree to the observance of several of the requirements contained in NRA codes.

Attacking one angle of the general problem, the Senate Judiciary Committee reported a bill which would amend the Clayton anti-trust act, to make more certain that statute's prohibition of discriminatory prices and other concessions to favored customers. The bill, for instance, would make it unlawful to grant a price differential to a customer who buys 10,000 units, against a purchaser of 5,000 units, unless such a differential actually represented a difference in the cost of manufacture or delivery.

Meanwhile, before the Supreme Court appeared the Sugar Institute, seeking to have reversed a lower court decree dissolving the institute, because of an alleged conspiracy among sugar companies, through it, to fix prices in violation of Federal anti-trust laws. Unless cut-throat competition can be eliminated from sugar distribution, it is argued, many companies cannot remain in business.

Wherever one goes in business circles, ways and means of controlling forces of destructive competition are discussed. Generally there is agreement that there should be free and open competition, and that neither price nor production agreements in the long run will benefit general welfare. But wonderment is expressed why the Federal Government should seek to force ruthless competition that does none any good.

For instance, the fertilizer industry cannot understand why the Federal Trade Commission has taken a year to consider its proposal for an "open price" system agreement, which would have each member of that industry's association file with a central agency its price schedules. Each would be free to change his prices whenever he wished, on giving notice to all his competitors, but he agrees to adhere to the filed price until he changes it. Such an arrangement would make for stability within the industry, and would discourage price cutting to get business, it is contended.

Those concerned with the problem might read with profit Mr. Richberg's book. It is not a dry history of the NRA, nor does it deal with personalities, except in passing. Mr. Richberg, with an open and tolerant mind, has undertaken to assess the lesson which NRA taught, its defects, the reasons why it lost popular support long before it was sentenced to a judicial death, and what use can be made of this experience. It should be required reading for all New Dealers and brain trusters who believe the world can be reconstructed basically in a year or two.

One reason Donald Richberg ascribes for the NRA's loss of popularity:

"When the New Dealer is called upon not only to distribute the cards but also to write the rules upon which their value depends, he is expected not simply to be fair but to achieve the miracle of dealing more hands that win than that lose."

Those fond of reciting the virtues of Congress and the shortcomings of the Supreme Court—such as a judge sitting in the case of a railroad which his law firm represented many years ago—might take a look at the 13 Senators and more than 100 members of the House who hold bonus certificates. Most of them voted for cash payment this year—thus voting money into their own pockets.

All those fervid exclamations at the United Mine Workers of America convention about the downtrodden worker in the coal pits, the starving and the destitute and about the "fat pocketbooks" of the Liberty Leaguers have a hollow sound after John L. Lewis, the union's president, has his salary increased from $12,000 to $25,000 annually.

Well, it just goes to show how wide open the door of opportunity really is. When the mine union executives presented Mr. Lewis with a platinum watch, he remarked that if they stuck with him, all of them could have such timepieces. So they are sticking with him.

And while in a captious mood, it may as well be pointed out that it sounds strange for a New Dealer like Jim Farley, who spends so much of his time assailing the rich, to tell an audience at the Miami Biltmore Hotel in Miami that the 'increased number of persons at that playground is evidence of the good times brought back by President Roosevelt. "A big play season here," said Jim, "usually means a prosperous season in the great centers of commerce and industry."

Roosevelt Studies Tax Bill

of curtailments, Reconstruction Finance Corporation Chairman Jesse H. Jones yesterday told his press conference that the RFC would show repayment of loans in excess of new commitments, adding that a statement of what loan authorizations can be canceled may be completed today.

The discussion of the possibility of enactment of retroactive processing taxes to recover the $180,000,000 impounded under the AAA continued yesterday at the White House and in the Justice Department. Department attorneys were believed to have told the Administration that retroactive processing taxes that might be included in the general tax measure would have to be confined to the fiscal year which began last July 1.

It was believed in some quarters that even if such retroactive action were limited to the current fiscal year most of the $180,000,000 could be recovered. It was to this money that Secretary of Agriculture Wallace referred recently when he termed the Supreme Court decision turning it back to processors "the greatest legalized steal in history." He, with other Administration officials and numerous Congressmen, have persistently pointed out that processing taxes were always passed on to the consumer, and that the money justly does not belong to the processors.

The group which met at the White House yesterday with the President gave him estimates of how much they have spent, their probable expenditures up to July 1, and their probable needs in the 1936-37 fiscal year.

Cuts May Pay Bonus.

In leaving, all refused to answer questions. Undersecretary of Agriculture Tugwell, however, stated that all word must come from the "the boss." A reporter said: "Are we men or mice?"

He answered smilingly, "Mice, by golly!"

The inflationist bloc was biding its time, awaiting the President's tax program before driving for the printing of greenbacks to pay the bonus. However, if, as Representative Doughton indicated, the President refrains from asking for bonus taxes, this drive may fold up hastily.

If curtailment of spending in a number of the agencies is begun, bonus taxes might not be necessary in any event, officials asserted, since the President indicated at his last conference that the cost of paying the bonus is roughly $100,000,000 more per year for the next nine years than it would be otherwise, and that much could be chipped away from the budget as a whole without impairing agency functionings, it was said.

The date on which the President will send to Congress his estimates for the tax measure remained indefinite last night. It was supposed that part of the delay, besides that incident to the thorough study of the problem, came from the need for more accurate estimates of the number of people who will be employed in private industry during the first quarter of 1936.

The approximate figure of around $2,000,000,000 needed for relief would afford employment on WPA projects to about 2,500,000 workers. On next July 1 about $1,000,000,000 of the allocated funds from the $4,000,000,000 work relief fund of last year will remain unspent, it was understood.

However, what levies will be sought other than for replacement of those wiped out by the adverse decision of the Supreme Court on the AAA, remained in doubt.

Naval Repairs Are Advocated For Treaty Goal

Vinson Introduces Bills to Push Program of Modernization.

By the Associated Press.

An extensive modernization program topped a list of recommendations given Congress yesterday in a White House - approved drive toward a treaty-strength Navy by 1942.

Chairman Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, of the House Naval Affairs Committee introduced bills to carry out the program.

The Navy memorandum, which said the recommendations were in line with policies approved by President Roosevelt, urged modernization of six warships, two aircraft carriers and one repair ship; improvements for 14 battleships and construction of 221,000 tons of auxiliary craft.

Warships Held Deficient.

The 14 battleships were said by the Navy to be "deficient in fundamental characteristics differentiating battleships from other types of vessels, namely, the effectiveness and efficiency in battle after damage has been sustained."

Re-engining of the Oklahoma, the New York and the Texas, together with replacement of their anti-aircraft batteries with modern installations, was proposed in the modernization program.

It also would provide for installation of modern fire-control systems in the Tennessee and the California and improvements of aircraft operations and anti-aircraft defense on the aircraft carriers Lexington and Saratoga. The Prometheus, a repair ship, would be converted to an oil-burning vessel.

The department recommended correction of compartmentation and damage control deficiencies on the West Virginia, Maryland, Colorado, California, Tennessee, New Mexico, Mississippi, Idaho, Arizona, Pennsylvania, Oklahoma, Nevada, New York and Texas, at a cost not to exceed $6,000,000.

"These deficiencies," said a letter from Acting Secretary of the Navy Henry L. Roosevelt, "have resulted in part from lack of current appropriations to correct defects as they developed, but in the greater part because of operational practices which made raising of the standards of compartmentation imperative."

High Standard Is Set.

The letter added that vessels which were designed and constructed to standards considered adequate at the time, "are now recognized as deficient in varying degree when called upon to carry out the excellent battle procedures which have been developed by operating personnel."

Representative May (Democrat), Kentucky, chairman of the Naval Appropriations sub-committee, has indicated the new appropriation bill will carry funds for modernization or replacement of existing vessels. The bills introduced yesterday merely provide authorization for the program and carry no appropriations.

Bemis Bag Co. Loses Suit to Labor Board

Cincinnati, Feb. 6 (AP).—The Bemis Brothers Bag Co., of Bemis, Tenn., lost in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals today its suit to prevent the National Labor Relations Board from conducting a hearing on a complaint of the United Textile Workers Union of America, Local 1838.

A court order denied the company's petition for temporary injunctive relief. It added that the order was issued "without any view as to the constitutionality" of the national labor relations act. The company sought to halt the hearing after the labor board started a hearing at Jackson, Tenn., January 28.

Airline Pilot Injured In Snowbank Crash

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 6 (AP).—A large American Airlines passenger plane was wrecked in a snowbank while attempting to take off from Albany Airport today and the pilot was injured. The only passenger, a man, escaped without serious injury.

The pilot, W. B. Lester, of New York City, was taken to St. Peters Hospital, Albany. He was unconscious.

The passenger, who Airline officials said was a "Mr. Allen," address not known, was treated by a doctor at the airport. He apparently suffered only from shock, an Airlines official said.

Schooner Tie-up Broken on Pacific

San Francisco, Feb. 6 (AP).—"Stem-up" orders broke the two-month tie-up of coastwise schooners today.

The Shipowners Association of the Pacific Coast announced acceptance of a Sailors Union offer to return to work.

The first request for a crew was made to the Sailors Union of the Pacific dispatching hall here by the Hammond Lumber Co. for the schooner Brunswick—one of 64 idle on the Coast.

Firemen were requested for the schooners Edna Christenson and the Brooklins. It was expected orders for full crews would follow and that 14 ships would be released in San Pedro by Monday.

Sailors Union officials expressed gratification with the end of the tie-up, started when the seamen demanded an in-port work day of six instead of eight hours.

The sailors will resume the eight-hour schedule and other conditions of an "award" contract made by a mediation board after the 1934 maritime strike.

Expert Advice Sought In Trolley Ventilation

Aid of experts of the Bureau of Standards is to be sought by the Public Utilities Commission in requesting an effective ventilating system for street cars and motor buses.

Riley E. Elgen, chairman of the commission, yesterday instructed Fred A. Sager, commission engineer, to ask the aid of the Bureau of Standards on behalf of the commission. Many complaints have been made about the alleged lack of ventilation in cars and buses.

Huge Warship Profit Charged To Private Yard

Witness Tells Arms Inquiry $3,000,000 Was Cleared on $11,500,000 Ship.

By the Associated Press.

A $3,000,000 profit on an $11,500,000 warship was attributed to the New York Shipbuilding Co. in expert testimony delivered yesterday before the Senate Munitions Committee.

Added to this was an estimate that for $48,000,000 the Government could equip itself for manufacture of most of its fighting implements.

The evidence was presented by Charles H. Spencer, head valuation engineer of the Interstate Commerce Commission, after exhaustive studies comparing construction costs in naval and private shipyards. In addition, he estimated the reproduction cost of important machine gun, aircraft and explosive plants.

His findings were:

That the average cost to the Government of cruisers built by the New York shipbuilding company was $14,994,667, as compared with an average of $14,085,204 for equivalent vessels built in navy yards, despite a 20 per cent higher wage scale in the latter.

$23,000,000 to Equip Yards.

That with the expenditure of $23,604,860 the naval yards could be equipped for the eventual annual construction of 13 vessels—1 light cruiser, 1 aircraft carrier, 3 destroyers, 5 light destroyers and 3 submarines—the 1935 program.

That the Colt Patent Firearms Co. plant for the manufacture of machine guns and small arms could be duplicated for $8,815,413; the Pratt-Whitney Aircraft Co., the Chance Vought Co. and the United Airports, Inc., could be reproduced for $11,108,938; and the military powder plant of the Dupont Co. for $2,563,085, with the construction of an acid plant at an estimated cost of $1,075,000.

Under questioning by committee members, Spencer added that he had included in the cost estimates for construction of vessels in Navy yards an average $350,000 allowance for 30 days annual leave for Government workers. The leave allowance is now 15 days, and Spencer said the differential might well be increased by that amount.

"Is the pay in private yards higher to offset the annual leave given the Government workers?" Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, asked.

Navy Pay Is Higher.

"I would say not," was Spencer's answer, "on the contrary, the Navy pay is 20 per cent higher."

"You mean they pay that much more and give the leave in addition?"

"That is correct."

Chairman Nye (Republican), North Dakota, of the committee intervened:

"With the increased pay and the increased cost of leave on pay still the navy yards are producing a comparable ship for nearly a million dollars less than the private yards?"

"That much less than the Government pays the private yards, yes," Spencer answered.

The committee also asked Spencer for a comparison of the cost of producing explosives in the Du Pont plant and in the Government plant at Indianhead, Md. He replied that the War Department had submitted the figures but asked that they be held confidential by the committee.

"The request for confidence will be respected of course," said Nye, "but I'm puzzled to know what use we can make of the figures under such restrictions."

Cummings Bars Use by Hoffman Of U. S. Agents

By the United Press.

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 6.—Gov. Harold G. Hoffman was told tonight that he would have to find the "accomplices" in the Lindbergh baby kidnaping without the aid of Department of Justice agents, who gathered much of the evidence that convicted Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

Refusal to Federal authorities to re-enter the case followed closely a similar refusal on the part of New York City police.

As a result Hoffman found himself tonight in the position of depending entirely on his own State police to prove his contention that Hauptmann was not alone in committing the kidnaping and murder.

Up the wires from Washington came the announcement of Attorney General Homer S. Cummings that the Department of Justice has seen no new evidence that justified it in sending its crack criminologists back into the case.

Cites Announcement.

Cummings called attention to the department's announcement of October 10, 1934, in which it closed its files on the Hauptmann case.

"That still covers the attitude of the department," he added.

His statement was made in response to an appeal for aid from Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, superintendent of the New Jersey State police, who re-opened the investigation on Hoffman's orders.

There are nine days left of the 30-day reprieve which Hoffman gave Hauptmann. The Governor has announced he does not intend to grant further reprieves.

The whole case sank deeper into New Jersey politics tonight when Henry W. Jeffers, Republican State chairman, clarified the position of his organization on the Governor and the Hauptmann case.

Hoffman Hamstrung.

Yesterday the Republican State committee assumed control of party policies and activities in New Jersey, thereby depriving Hoffman of power and influence in party councils. Jeffers denied this was done because of Hoffman's interference in the Hauptmann case.

"At no time has the Governor's action in the Hauptmann case been before the committee for consideration," Jeffers said. "Gov. Hoffman was consulted before the meeting of the committee. He approved our idea that the State committee should assume jurisdiction over party policies."

Hoffman, 40 years old today, went to New York tonight to attend a birthday dinner.

New Snowfall

street northwest, and John C. Mosley, 48, of 504 Third street southeast, were treated by hospital physicians.

Warnings of a Northeast storm were issued by the Weather Bureau. The storm, which is developing off the Florida Coast, is headed for Cape Hatteras and the Virginia Capes, where it is expected to reach gale force.

A new flood menace was feared in Georgia and Alabama, where snow and rain storms are predicted. Rivers are already nearing the high water mark.

23 Below at Twin Cities.

North Dakota, Minnesota and Iowa were frost-bound, while sub-zero cold gripped most of the Western Plain States.

Kirksville, Mo., counted its fifteenth day of sub-zero temperatures, a new record. New Jersey passed its twenty-first successive day of sub-freezing temperatures.

For 20 days Minneapolis has experienced sub-zero weather, with minus 23 recorded for yesterday.

The coldest spot in the country yesterday was Willow City, N. Dak., where an unofficial 51 below zero was listed.

Northeastern States experienced drops of 10 to 20 degrees, while Midwest States took advantage of more temperate weather to clear drifts which have snarled traffic for days.

Southern cities, from Florida to Arkansas, reported their fuel situation as serious. Acute fuel shortages were reported in South Dakota and many parts of Illinois.

Friends and Foes at Dog's 'Disarmament' Trial

Post Staff Photos.

other stories to indicate Hamlet was vicious.

"Have you ever seen the dog attack a human being?" Defense Attorney Tumulty asked.

"I am a human being. I believe," said Mrs. Boggs.

John E. Noone, who lives in the same apartment house, said that on November 4 Hamlet had jumped on his Scottie.

"My dog was bitten on the back," said Mr. Noone.

C. H. Jones, another tenant of the apartment house, said that Hamlet once had chased his dog, a smaller animal.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Lauderdale interposed a question.

"Did the little dog bark," he asked, "when the big dog chased him?"

The answer, if there was one, was drowned in laughter.

Mrs. L. W. (Chip) Robert, one of the many attractive women who attended the "trial," was a witness for Hamlet. She said she had known him for some time, and always favorably.

"He plays with my schnauser and my cocker spaniel pup," she said, "and he has never hurt either of them."

George Coulon, a real estate broker and dog fancier, said he had known Hamlet since he was 8 months old. As a puppy, he said, Hamlet was very timid. Hearing that neighbors had branded him as vicious in a petition, Mr. Coulon related, he went to the Morgan home Wednesday night.

"When I went in," he continued, "Hamlet opened his mouth. I put my hand in it and he wagged his tail and was very friendly.

Boars and Babies.

"I raise Great Danes as a hobby. They are raised in Europe to hunt wild boar and to mind babies."

Mr. Coulon was obviously sincere, but Hamlet's detractors thought the baby-minding note was too much, and they laughed raucously.

Persisting, Mr. Coulon insisted Great Danes were really chummy, gentle dogs. It is merely their great size that frightens people, he said.

George Schires, the Morgan butler, testified that he always took Hamlet out on a leash. Mrs. Boggs insisted that she had seen Hamlet leap over a 4½-foot fence around the Morgan home, but Mrs. Morgan denied this. It was true, she said, that Hamlet had tried to clear the fence, but she was emphatic in saying that he had never succeeded.

There were many other witnesses, for and against Hamlet. They included a former member of Congress, E. Hart Fenn, of Kentucky, who said he had heard stories of Hamlet's sorties against other dogs, but had never witnessed any. Mrs. L. C. Cameron said she had frequently seen the big fellow unattended, and she quoted her servants as saying he had attacked other dogs.

Mr. Morgan, who is secretary of the Democratic national committee, seemed confident after the hearing that Hamlet's address would continue to be 2520 Massachusetts avenue.

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 6.—Harvard College Observatory tonight announced the discovery of the weight of the heaviest star known to astronomy.

Dr. Sergei I. Gaposchkin, who made the discovery, found the star to be 40,000,000 times heavier than the earth, and 70 times heavier than the sun.

He found, too, that it is an eclipsing star, composed of two celestial giants, which, as they revolve about each other hide each other from the earth.

So enormous is the larger of the pair that it has a radius of 10,000,000 miles, 28 times the radius of the sun.

Some conception of the star's magnitude may be gained from the fact that, lonely as the moon may appear in space, it is only 238,857 miles from the earth.

The smaller star is, comparatively, of only slightly smaller proportion. Its radius is 7,000,000 miles and its mass 30 times that of the sun.

Known to astronomy as "29 Canis Majoris" (Constellation of the Great Dog), the star is easily visible to the eye in the southern sky, under Sirius and near the Constellation Orion.

It is one of the hottest of known stars, and its light, traveling at a speed of 186,324 miles a second, takes 20,000 years to reach the earth.

Gaposchkin is a member of the Harvard Observatory staff. He studied hundreds of photographs before completing his computation, which is based on the gravitational behavior of the two component stars, revealed through an examination of changes in their light and spectrum.

Heretofore only one double star has been known with a mass approaching 29 Canis Majoris.

Clerk Cleared Of Contempt in Nixon Dispute

Captain Contends Service of Divorce Suit Papers Was Invalid.

R. J. Conway, night clerk of the Stoneleigh Court apartments, was cleared of a charge of contempt in the District Supreme Court yesterday, when Justice Joseph W. Cox held there was insufficient proof that he had interferred with Harold T. Scott when the latter sought to serve Mrs. Thomas Hay Nixon, third wife of Capt. Nixon, U. S. A., with divorce papers several weeks ago.

Scott testified Conway had refused to give him information about Mrs. Nixon, and once called police to have him evicted from the apartment house, and then, on the night Scott said he served the papers, had sought to warn Mrs. Nixon of his presence.

Even so, Justice Cox held, there was no showing Conway had unduly interfered with the serving of the papers, which named the third Mrs. Nixon co-respondent in a divorce suit by Mrs. Annette Pauline Nixon, second wife of the captain, who charged her husband had not obtained a valid divorce in Pennsylvania last year.

Scott's two-month effort to serve the papers may be in vain at that. Capt. Nixon and his wife say, in a formal motion in the District Supreme Court, that when Scott chucked the papers into Mrs. Nixon's lap in her automobile, they flew out of the other side of the car. They now wish to have the court pass on whether the service of the papers constituted valid service. The question will be ruled upon later.

Taylor Is Acquitted In Death of Woman

Deliberating less than 15 minutes, a jury in the District Supreme Court yesterday exonerated Frederick G. Taylor, 52-year-old amateur photographer, of a charge of second degree murder in connection with the slaying of 23-year-old Evelyn Jordan.

A "death-bed" statement by Mrs. Jordan, that she shot herself in a fit of despondency, was read to the jury by Defense Attorneys George L. Pass and Josiah Lyman. In addition, four policemen testified Mrs. Jordan had told them she shot herself.

Mrs. Jordan was found in a dying condition in a New Jersey avenue southeast rooming house last September. Police believed she had been shot early in the evening, though her plight was not discovered until nearly midnight.

Ex-Senator Dill Faces $25,000 Suit for Balm

Nephew's Wife Also Names Mother-in-Law; Job Here Is Cited.

By the Associated Press.

Mount Vernon, Ohio, Feb. 6.—Court records disclosed today that Mrs. Margie Heaton Dill has filed a $25,000 suit against former United States Senator C. C. Dill, of Washington, her uncle by marriage, and Mrs. Grace Dill, of Fredericktown, Ohio, her mother-in-law.

All papers in the case were removed after filing.

Barton U. Blair, attorney for Mrs. Margie Dill, said the suit was for "alienation of affections."

Mrs. Dill, the plaintiff, was married to Wendell Dill, nephew of the former Senator, while both were attending Fredericktown High School.

Dill has been working in Washington, D. C., for the last year and his wife is employed here, her lawyer said.

Former Senator C. C. Dill said yesterday all he knew about the Mount Vernon, Ohio, alienation of affections case against him was that several days ago he was served with a summons, which did not specify the complaint against him.

He added that he had nothing to say "for quotation" on the subject, and about all he could offer as "background" was that he had found his nephew a job two or three years ago when he first was married, so he supposed he was guilty of that.

Although the nephew, Wendell Dill, is in Washington, he does not work for the former Senator, and his uncle said he did not know just where he could be found. Immediate efforts by outsiders to locate him were unavailing.

4 Burned to Death In Factory Explosion

NorthBergen, N. J., Feb. 6 (AP).—Four persons were burned to death and two others seriously injured in an explosion and fire at an embroidery factory here today.

The wife of the owner, Mrs. Albina Vittori, 45, and daughter, Ada, 24, perished in the flames, Italo Vittori, 50, the owner, and Mrs. Louise Ciotti, 47, an employe, died in North Hudson Hospital of their burns tonight.

Another of Vittori's daughters, Dolores, 16, was critically seared.

Police authorities had made little headway tonight in determining the cause of the blast and fire which followed.

Rabbis Sponsor Fast.

Warsaw, Feb. 6 (AP).—Polish rabbis sponsored today a move for a one-day fast by international Jewry in protest against a proposed Polish law for discontinuance of slaughter of animals in accordance with Jewish rites. The proposal was supported by the Polish Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Sect Absolved In Desert Death Of Investigator

Servant Confesses Slaying Taylor, Who Violated Tribal Secrecy.

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Feb. 6.—Authorities announced tonight the murder of Carl Taylor, globe-trotting writer, was solved with the alleged confession of his Spanish-American houseboy.

Sheriff Ross Salazar said he was satisfied with the story of Modesto Trujillo, 16, that he shot and robbed his friend and employer in a mountain cabin near here last night.

As a result, investigators discarded a theory that vengeance of a strange religious sect—the "Penitentes"—lay behind the slaying.

Raymond Moley, former Presidential adviser and editor of Today, wired authorities here from New York offering aid in any further investigation. Local officers had said, however, the case was closed.

Taylor had just completed an article for Today, "Agony in New Mexico." He described the weird rites of flagellation practiced by the Penitentes, styled "the Brothers of the Blood of Christ." Moley offered to permit New Mexico authorities to examine the article.

It was disclosed that Taylor frankly regarded the assignment "a dangerous one."

Under questioning, the houseboy told of shooting Taylor with a small caliber revolver as the writer sat in his lonely cabin in the Sandia Mountains. Following the youth's directions, the officers found $180 in travelers' checks, $14.40 in cash, the writer's billfold and keys nearby.

Taylor's friends said Trujillo accompanied Taylor Tuesday night to the Penitente "Morada," or house of worship, to take flashlight pictures. The "Hermano Mayor," or elder brother, a leader of the colony, also accompanied Taylor.

Editors of Taylor's Today manuscript telegraphed to New Mexico authorities a paragraph they considered pertinent.

Of a youthful servant, it said:

"I think (he) secretly cherished an ambition some day to be elected the village Cristo and hang on the cross."

The enactment of the crucifixion, using ropes and wires, is the climax of the wildest of the Penitentes' rites.

Most of the "brothers" are of pure or nearly pure Indian blood. Many white men caught spying on their meetings have been beaten and tortured.

Reorganization Asked By Elkins Coal Firm

Elkins, W. Va., Feb. 6.—A hearing will be held here February 20, before Federal Judge William E. Baker, on a petition of the South Pittsburgh Coal Co. for permission to reorganize under the revised bankruptcy laws.

The company lists its assets at $127,915.65 and its liabilities as totaling $74,177.61. It asks the court to assume jurisdiction of the property, until plans for reorganization can be worked out and presented to the court.

Strike Halted

A strikers' committee, Schoenberg, Durkin, Federal Conciliator J. E. O'Connor, L. C. Bjork, National Labor Relations Board examiner, and Dr. George Michell, spokesman for the company, resumed efforts to reach an agreement at Peoria today.

But the issue prompting the general holiday remained unsettled. That was labor's insistence that Police Chief Donahue be discharged because he assertedly fired tear gas at pickets at the distillery. The assembly warned they would not retreat from their demands that he be dismissed.

Strike Fixed for Today.

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—The neeleworkers who produce 90 per cent of the dresses worn by American women tonight awaited the call, expected tomorrow, for a strike.

While Mayor LaGuardia conferred with manufacturers' representatives, Julius Hochman, manager of the dressmakers' joint board, said a general strike in the industry was "inevitable."

"It is the historic mission of the union to lift the dress industry out of its present chaos and confusion," Hochman said.

"For two and a half years, the jobbers, waving the jobber-contractor system as a magician's wand, have caused shops to appear and disappear; have changed price lines; have caused books to tell fairy tales.

"We have succeeded in checking them, but at superhuman exertion and a costly price. This time, we will get an agreement and the power to enforce every word of it.

"If we cannot get what everybody agrees is a just and necessary series of demands through negotiations, we will win it through the general strike."

Shorter hours and higher wages are among the union's demands.

The strike, expected to be called at a mass meeting tomorrow, would involve approximately 105,000 workers in metropolitan New York.

Swanson Falls Against Chair; Rib Fractured

Secretary, Long Ill, Reported to Be Improving at Navy Hospital.

Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson, 74 years old and frail in health, was undergoing treatment for a fractured rib in Naval Hospital last night.

Capt. George C. Thomas, of the Navy Medical Corps, commanding officer at the hospital, discounted the seriousness of the Secretary's injury.

"He is doing very well," he said, "considering his advanced age and the nature of the injury."

Swanson slipped in the bathroom of his home at 2136 R street northwest Wednesday night, falling against a chair. He was taken to the hospital immediately, although, according to Capt. Thomas, the injury was not sufficiently severe to prevent him from walking.

Despite favorable reports from the hospital, official Washington viewed the Secretary's injury with considerable alarm.

Swanson has been in ill-health much of the time since resigning his seat in the Senate to accept an appointment from President Roosevelt to head the Navy Department on March 4, 1933.

His poor health has kept him indoors on occasions when other Cabinet members were keeping pace with the Capital's social and official whirl. Frequently he used a cane. On other occasions he was accompanied by a naval aid.

Swanson became a specialist in naval affairs while in the Senate, and in 1932 he represented the United States at the Geneva disarmament conference.

It was said at the hospital last night that the rib fracture is not of the sort likely to produce complications. It is entirely possible, Capt. Thomas said, the Secretary will be able to leave his bed in a few days.

The department, meanwhile, is in charge of Col. Henry L. Roosevelt, the Assistant Secretary.

Fewer German Trains Cross Polish Corridor

Berlin (Friday) Feb. 7 (AP).—East Prussia, which is separated from Germany proper by the Pomorze (Polish Corridor), was still further isolated today when the Polish government reduced the number of trains allowed to cross the Pomorze because of the failure to pay transit fees.

The free City of Danzig was similarly affected.

The action marked the first open difficulty between Poland and Germany since they signed a treaty of friendship two years ago.

German officials were irritated by Poland's action, while the German press expressed the hope that "the Poles soon will come around to a better neighborly spirit."

Post Is Reorganized.

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 6.—Former Pythian lodge officials have organized a past chancellors association, with State Senator Robert B. Kimble as president. Other officers are Baird A. Wolford, vice president; Julius E. Schindler, secretary, and Odith M. Brotemarkle, treasurer. The association will attend the rally and class initiation February 17.

Woodside Boy Found Hanged; Coroner Calls Death Accident

Mother Finds Son's Lifeless Body When She Goes to Call Him at the Family's Dinner Hour; Youth Strangled by Bathrobe Cord.

Dinner was on the table at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Howard D. Dozier, at Woodside, Md., last night, Mrs. Dozier called her family. All appeared but her younger son, Sidney, 15. She went to his room and found him hanging lifeless from a door, a bathrobe cord looped around his neck.

Mrs. Dozier told investigators that when she entered the room she saw her son apparently standing against the door of a wardrobe. She spoke to him. He didn't answer. She touched him and his body felt cold. A physician and the Silver Spring Volunteer rescue squad were summoned. They could not revive the boy.

After consultation with State's Attorney James H. Pugh, Dr. H. H. Howlett, of Silver Spring, said that he would issue a certificate of accidental death. He said that the boy, a student at the Paul Junior High School in Washington, had been in good spirits and good health recently, that he was an adventurous boy and possibly had been amusing himself when he slipped with the cord around his neck.

Police investigators said that the boy's body was hanging with his feet barely touching the floor, when he was found. The cord, tied around his neck, went up over the door and was tied to a hinge behind the door.

The Doziers have been prominent residents of Woodside for the past ten years. The father, an economist in the Department of Agriculture and a staff member of the Atlantic Monthly, has long been active in civic affairs. They have two other children, Douglas, 17, and Mary Louise, 13.

Prayer Discussed By Coast Visitor

Prayer consists not so much in asking for the things necessary to human happiness, as in admitting that already God has supplied man generously with everything requisite, an audience of Christian Scientists and friends was told at a meeting last night in First Church of Christ, Scientist.

The speaker, Peter V. Ross, C. S. B., of San Francisco, Calif., discussed "Christian Science: The Power of Endless Life."

"God cannot, in His very nature, withhold His affluence," said Mr. Ross. "All that He has—His life, His intelligence, His bounty—is man's. One should say this, recognize it, admit it, and do so intelligently, unreservedly, gratefully, expectantly. This is the effectual fervent prayer, which availeth much."

Ethiopian War Writer To Relate Experiences

Four months of adventure as a war correspondent in Ethiopia will be described before the National Geographic Society this (Friday) evening by Josef Israels 2d during an illustrated lecture in Constitution Hall.

Israels has just returned from Addis Ababa, Haile Selassie's capital, where he served as special correspondent of the New York Times and Pathe News. His experiences included a flight over the battle line in an Ethiopian plane, dodging bombs in an Ethiopian village being bombarded by Italian flyers, and seeing native warriors fighting American Indian style in the bush. Motion pictures will be supplemented by news reels and colored lantern slides of Ethiopia and the theater of war.

WPA Funds to Start Bristol Airport Work

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bristol, Va., Feb. 6.—Final approval, and allotment of funds for the Bristol airport project, has been received at the offices of the Bristol WPA district, and work will begin immediately, W. M. Hull, assistant director, said today.

A total of $27,430.65 will be spent on the project. Federal funds of $24,055.65 will be available, the sponsors supplying the remaining $3,375.

In full operation, the project is expected to provide work for 114 men over a period of four months.

Governor Hints Act to Control Bank of Canada

Speech Before Parliament Warns Credit, Currency May Force Step.

By the Associated Press.

Ottawa, Feb. 6.—Government ownership of the Bank of Canada was forecast today in the speech from the throne by Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor General of Canada, at the opening session of Parliament.

It was the first time Lord Tweedsmuir (John Buchan) had presided at the opening of a Dominion Parliament.

"The control credit, and the issue of currency, being public matters of direct concern to every citizen," he said, "it is intended, at the present session, to ask Parliament to make such changes in the ownership and control of the Bank of Canada as may be necessary to give to the government a predominant interest in the ownership as well as effective control of the bank."

Provision for "a greater measure of government authority" over the Canadian National Railways, a House committee on radio broadcasting and further inquiry into the importation and distribution of anthracite coal also were listed.

Discussing the problem of unemployment, which he said was Canada's "most urgent" one, Lord Tweedsmuir said that when there is no voluntary control of industrial policy "there are the strongest of reasons for state intervention."

"My ministers are of the opinion that industries should recognize an obligation to co-operate in every manner possible in continuing and providing employment, and that labor and consumers have a right to have their voice heard and influence felt, in the control of industrial policy," the governor general stated.

"Where these ends cannot be effected through voluntary co-operation of all parties to industry, my ministers are of the opinion that there are the strongest of reasons for state intervention."

Parliament, will be invited, he said, to approve the Candian-United States trade agreement, which Lord Tweedsmuir added, "my ministers believe" will "mark a great improvement in Canada's international economic relations" and "to contribute to the reversal of the trend toward extreme economic nationalism, which has been undermining standards of living and embittered relations abetween countries all over the world * * *"

Wagner Predicts New Housing Bills

By the Associated Press.

Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, predicted yesterday that "within two weeks" comprehensive housing legislation would be introduced in Congress.

"There are many working on it," he said in an interview, "and some of us are meeting on the problem almost every day."

Among factors in the program, he listed the possibility of slum clearance projects, and in some form to small home builders, and perhaps Government insurance of mortgages to promote building "in a big way."

"Nearly everyone is convinced that some sort of Government aid will be necessary for slum clearance," the Senator said. "It may be subsidy in construction, or direct grants on an annual basis, but it must be something."

Selected Chateau Bottled Wines at Remarkably Low Prices

Since repeal millions of words have been written about wines, their selection and enjoyment. The wisest of these, in the opinion of those who know, are those contained in The Complete Wine Book by Mr. Frank Schoonmaker. This book has solidified Mr. Schoonmaker's reputation as America's greatest wine authority.

Personally selected by FRANK SCHOONMAKER

Words whet one's appetite, but never satisfy it, so in discussing wines with Mr. Schoonmaker one day we asked him: "What do you think is America's greatest wine need today?" "For good, sound, honest wines at sensible prices," he promptly replied. "Do you know where such wines can be had?" "I can dig them out." "Will you—for us?"

The upshot of that conversation was a buying tour of more than 5,000 miles through the wine countries of Europe. Mr. Schoonmaker visited vineyards, explored cellars, caves, warehouses, tasting with a tongue no wine could lie to, attending auctions no American had ever bid in, listening to secrets from growers and bottlers who had long been his close friends.

These wines are offered in Washington for the first time today. If you have the slightest interest in wines... if you ever expect to grace your table and honor yourself and your guests with a truly fine wine... you certainly should come and see these wines... learn more about them. Browse among the bottles the way you would in a friendly bookstore. The labels themselves are enchanting... the wines superb ... and the prices so sensible you will not be able to resist carrying away several bottles and having a case or two follow.

Among the treasures Mr. Schoonmaker discovered and which Acker, Merrall & Condit offer you are the following:

CHATEAU MARGAUX 1929. First Classed growth of Margaux, Medoc. Chateau bottled. 1929 was one of the most successful vintages of Chateau Margaux since the war. This is a wine in every way worthy of one of the four first growths of Bordeaux.

CHATEAU CLOS FOURTET 1931. First growth of St. Emilion. Chateau bottled. Discovered by Mr. Schoonmaker in an old cellar under the historic Quai des Chartrons in Bordeaux. Perfectly balanced, gracious, with an excellent bouquet and unusual finesse. An admirable wine for the price.

CHATEAU MARGAUX BLANC 1929. Pavillon Blanc of Chateau Margaux, Margaux, Medoc. Chateau bottled. A very rare and almost unknown white wine of considerable grace and breeding. In character it is somewhat similar to a dry Graves.

CHABLIS 1933. J. Moreau Fils. Selected by Mr. Schoonmaker in the town of Chablis itself. Has the delicacy, the clean, dry finish and the faint flinty taste which made authentic Chablis famous the world over as the perfect wine with oysters.

And this is but a foretaste of what we have in store for you. A full listing, with descriptions and prices, will be gladly sent upon request. That you may appreciate how sensible our prices are, we list here the cost of various case lots of Schoonmaker selected wines:

Scientific Plan Held Solution For Democracy

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 6.—Adoption of scientific methods which the public must learn through newspapers, was suggested as the key to survival of democracy in a symposium of well-known scientists, educators, industrial executives and medical men reported tonight to the American Institute by Howard W. Blakeslee, Associated Press science editor.

The American Institute, one of the oldest scientific organizations in the United States, tonight awarded its gold medal to Dr. John C. Merriam, president of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, and fellowships to Dr. Harrison E. Howe, editor of industrial and engineering chemistry, and Blakeslee.

This was the first award of fellowships by the Institute. The medal to Dr. Merriam was "for his discoveries in paleontology, his effective promotion of research and his recognition of science in man's affairs."

To Dr. Rowe the fellowship was "for service to science and industry by interchange of research results among investigators throughout the world and by creating a better understanding of the functions of research and its place in the advancement of civilization."

To Blakeslee "for his contribution to man's fuller understanding of the world in which he lives by accurate presentation of the news of science in the language of the layman and for his service in the development of science through fostering the public's interest in its advancement."

Blakeslee read replies of prominent men to whom he had written for opinions on the "influence on the public of science news in the press." Typical of these comments was the following by Dr. Robert A. Millikan:

"I regard the American newspaper as on the whole the most effective adult educational influence in the United States. If our democracy is to survive, the whole voting public must be educated so as to use the rational, scientific mode of approach to all our problems, instead of the emotional, superstitious and 'hunch' mode of approach."

Mrs. Lawton Dies; Burial Tomorrow

Mrs. Ellen Young Lawton, wife of Stanley Lawton, 419 Marietta place, died at Garfield Hospital yesterday after a brief illness. She was 35.

She is survived by her husband and two children, Catherine and Ellen; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Young, of 58 Channing street; two sisters, Mrs. Jean Webber and Miss Isobel Young, and a brother, Charles Young.

Funeral services will be held at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow from Tabler's funeral chapel, 4217 Ninth street northwest. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Princess Mdivani Will Marry Her Ex-Brother-in-Law, Serge

LOUISE VAN ALEN MDIVANI.

By the Associated Press.

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 6.—Princess Louise Van Alen Mdivani will be married to her erstwhile brother-in-law, Prince Serge Mdivani in a quiet ceremony at the Van Alen villa here Saturday.

The bride, the daughter of Mrs. James Laurens Van Alen, of Newport, R. I., and Palm Beach, is the divorced wife of the late Prince Alexis Mdivani, brother of the bridegroom-to-be.

Prince Alexis was killed in an automobile accident in Spain last year shortly after Barbara Hutton, Woolworth heiress, divorced him in Reno, Nev., and married Count Haugwitz von Reventlow, Danish nobleman.

The wedding, at which Dr. W. E. Biederwolf, pastor of Poinciana Chapel, will officiate, will be witnessed only by close friends and members of the family.

The couple will cruise for two months in the 98-foot house yacht Jedge, which Mdivani has leased from the owner, B. W. Lamson, Cincinnati and Miami Beach sportsman.

A large dinner party to be given by Mrs. Van Alen, sr., at her villa tonight is one of several pre-nuptial events.

White House Card Sent Accused Aid

By the Associated Press.

A White House spokesman denied last night there was any significance to the sending of a reception invitation to Elmer B. O'Hara, chairman of the Michigan Democratic Central Committee.

O'Hara, who has faced charges of both bribery and election fraud during the past year, has been deprived by party leaders of all power except that of presiding at State committee meetings.

The invitation to attend last night's reception was sent O'Hara recently, the spokesman said, "because all State chairmen were invited. The list was submitted by the proper source and was for the reception only, not the dinner."

The "proper source" was not revealed but presumably referred to the office of Chairman James A. Farley, of the Democratic National Committee. White House invitation lists are prepared months in advance, and are seldom altered.

O'Hara, with 21 others, last night awaited the verdict of a jury at Detroit on charges they participated in an election recount fraud in 1934.

11,401,000 Jobless, A. F. L. Estimates

By the Associated Press.

The American Federation of Labor last night estimated December unemployment at 11,401,000 and looked at the future with pessimism.

"Although the new year has opened with an unemployment situation more encouraging on the whole than any since the NRA program, there is still no prospect of work for more than a mere handful of the 11,400,000 unemployed," said William Green, federation president.

"We may expect the spring pick-up in industry this year to create at least temporary jobs for a small portion of the unemployed but the vast majority have no assurance of anything but continued joblessness and dependence on relief and Government projects. Clearly millions will still be jobless when business reaches normal," he said.

"Are we willing to accept permanent unemployment?" the report asked.

School Head Speaks.

Waynesboro, Pa., Feb. 6.—R. G. Mowrey, superintendent of the Franklin County schools, spoke here last night at a meeting of the Washington Township Parent-Teacher Association on the subject, "Perils of Too Rapid Promotion." An illustrated talk was given by K. G. Landsburg, Interstate Milk Producers Association representative.

House Silicosis Testimony Held 'Preposterous'

Head of Contracting Firm Denounces Statements of Witnesses.

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 6.—P. H. Faulconer, president of Rhinehart & Dennis, contractors for the Hawks Nest, W. Va., tunnel, today charged that some of the witnesses before the House sub-committee investigating silicosis deaths on the project had made "preposterous and absurd" statements.

He suggested, in a statement addressed to William P. Connery, jr., chairman of the House Committee on Labor, that "the best way for the committee to inform itself reliably will be for it to go and see the work we have done, and the conditions surrounding it, and at the same time acquaint yourself at first hand with the entire situation."

Faulconer, together with E. J. Perkins, vice president and superintendent of the tunnel job, declined an invitation to appear before the committee this week, but presented a written statement in reply to charges that the company failed to provide safety equipment for workmen.

In reply to an assertion by Representative Vito Marcantonio (Republican), New York, that 476 men died of silicosis in the digging of the tunnel, Faulkner declared that "we know of no case of silicosis contracted on this job."

"There are official records of 31 deaths in West Virginia of persons in our employ, or who had been employed by us, and we have heard of five others outside of that State. Mortality tables in general use by insurance companies indicate that out of the 4,931 adult males employed on this job, nearly 300 would be expected to die of natural causes from the beginning of the work (1930) up to this time," Faulconer said.

"The recorded vital statistics show that during the years the tunnel was drilled, the death rate among our white employes was less than the death rate among the adult white males of Fayette County at large, and that the death rate among our colored employes was approximately the same as the death rate among the adult colored males of said county."

Relief Survey Held For Drama Projects

Richmond, Va., Feb. 6 (AP).—Two units of the Federal WPA theater project in Rockingham and Campbell counties, are being tentatively planned, subject to a survey now under way to determine if a sufficient number of theater workers are now on WPA rolls.

Rockingham County eligibles will be interviewed by the State supervisor Monday, in Harrisonburg. Campbell County eligibles will be interviewed by the State supervisor at the Lynchburg WPA office Tuesday.

Those found qualified will be assigned work in their respective counties, as directors of several community theater guilds to be established.

Court Upholds Jail Sentence Given Reporter

Second Free in Contempt Case Arising From Lyddane Trial.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 6.—A protracted court battle, involving four appeals from a decision of the Montgomery County Circuit Court, sentencing two Washington reporters to 90 days in jail, ended here today when the Maryland Court of Appeals affirmed the lower court's decree against David Lee, but dissolved proceedings against Pat Frank.

Judge William Mason Shehan's opinion, upholding the 90-day jail sentence against Lee, was concurred in by the eight justices. Chief Judge Caroll T. Bond dissented, by an opinion which freed Frank from possible imprisonment.

The contempt proceedings against the two reporters resulted from a criminal case against Anne Lyddane, John M. Boland and John H. Carnell, jointly indicted by the Montgomery County grand jury for conspiring to murder Francis S. Lyddane, Mrs. Lyddane's husband.

Boland was first tried before Judges Hammond Urner, Arthur D. Willard and Charles W. Woodward, on June 11, 1935. The justices deliberated on the case but did not render a verdict until completion of the Lyddane case. The Washington newspaper, in an edition reaching Rockville at midnight, ran an article "purported to disclose the discussions and conclusions of the justices before the verdict was announced."

The American Newspapers, Inc., employers of Frank and Lee, were fined $5,000 by the Montgomery court June 26 1935, and the reporters were sentenced to 90 days in jail.

The tribunal, upholding the trial court's procedure, said "A flagrant and inexcusable contempt upon the authority and dignity of the Montgomery County Court was practiced. In the briefs and oral arguments, and in the proceedings there is no denial that newspaper publications set out in the record what amounted to a contempt."

"As to the participation of Pat Frank in connection with the publication, his statements are not conclusive as those of David Lee. The latter has so implicated himself by his definite and direct statements that his guilt is clearly shown, and the judgment against him must be affirmed."

Chief Judge Bond, dissenting from the opinion on Frank, said: "As the appellant, Frank declined to answer and purge or clear himself of the contempt if he could, I have not been able to agree that a distinction may be made in his favor. The evidence of statements made by him tends to implicate rather than clear him."

"The divulging of judicial secrets always has been regarded as an interference with the proper functioning of the courts and the administration of justice. The secrets of a grand jury room, and in the courts, in respect to the use of cameras must be respected and remain inviolate, and any persons violating these features of judicial proceedings are properly held for contempt."

Air Officials Study Baltimore Field

Airport Peace

port proprietors plan to expand the flying field so as to increase their chances of selling it to the Federal Government, would not estimate what the property might be worth.

Chairman King of the Senate committee suggested that Chew and Solomon reach a definite agreement as to terms so that the legislation might be enacted without opposition.

The Senate committee hearing delved into the ten-year-old controversy over whether Washington Airport or Gravelly Point is the better site for a permanent District airport, but the argument came to naught.

Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, author of the Senate bill to authorize the President to name a site commission, said he would ask for a conference with the House managers at once. Whether any agreement may be reached is problematical.

The conference, however, will not restrict or influence the efforts to close Military road, the Senator said.

The Aero Club submitted to Senator King a memorandum reiterating its demand that Gravelly Point be chosen as a permanent site for the District Airport, and Thomas S. Settle, secretary of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, sought to have the Gibson Gravelly Point bill substituted for the Tydings measure.

Agreement Is Reached.

The tentative agreement between Solomon and the Arlington County board regarding the sale of Military road, if deeded to Arlington, was reached at a special meeting of the board yesterday morning.

The airline officials, James D. Condon, president of Central Airlines, Sigmund Janas and F. L. Duncan, aids to the president of the American Airlines, were met at Logan Feld by Louis Rawlins, airport manager.

"I've been told by the chief to tell you that if you want to come in temporarily, just to move in as things are now," Rawlins said. "However, if you want to stay permanently, then we can talk turkey."

After inspecting the Baltimore field, the airline executives called to Rawlins as they departed by plane for Washington:

"We'll be seeing you in a week."

Doctor's Hearing Set In Hewitt Sterilization

San Francisco, Feb. 6 (AP).—One of two physicians charged with mayhem in Ann Cooper Hewitt's sterilization case was arraigned today. Dr. T. E. Tillman appeared before Municipal Judge Sylvain J. Lazarus. His preliminary hearing was set for February 17. The same date will be set for Dr. Samuel G. Boyd when he appears, probably tomorrow.

The mother, also named in the mayhem complaint, has not advised the district attorney whether she will come here from the East voluntarily. Miss Hewitt charged she was tricked into the operation in a plot to deprive her of inheritance from the estate of her late inventor father, Peter Hewitt.

Richberg Writes NRA 'Rainbow of Depression'

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—Donald R. Richberg, acting chief of the NRA when it was declared unconstitutional, reviews that institution in a book published tomorrow, and concludes that the final estimate of NRA's value must depend upon the viewpoint of the estimator.

"Some people are much interested in tagging the NRA as a failure or a success," he says in the volume entitled The Rainbow.

The author's own viewpoint is suggested on the title page of the book, where he refers to the sunshine of prosperity, the deluge of the depression and "the rainbow of the NRA."

Fairfax Plans Frame Schools For Overflow

Board Flooded With Pleas for Annexes, but Funds Are Lacking.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 43-F-31.

Fairfax County will have to resort to the use of temporary frame school rooms during the next school year, Supt. W. T. Woodson, told the county school board yesterday.

Many of the schools have become overcrowded during the last two years. Additional classrooms are to provide for the overflow.

Superintendent Woodson said the recent defeat of the school bond issue to finance additional facilities made him "unalterably opposed to borrowing any more money from the State literary fund for building purposes."

Last summer the school board proposed a school building program to relieve the overcrowded condition in the county to be financed by a PWA grant and a local bond issue but this was defeated when put to a vote. The county can borrow money from the State literary fund without submitting it to a vote of the citizens.

"When the people are willing to vote to provide funds to erect modern class rooms and buildings," Woodson asserted, "I will be willing to co-operate with them, but until they do we will have to provide for the children the best way we can. Schools have been my life's work and despite community jealousies and prejudice the welfare and education of the children of our county as a whole is the prime consideration."

P.-T. A. Request.

The Parent-Teacher Association presented a request to the school board yesterday asking that the Franklin-Sherman School be repaired and the high school be placed on a basis comparable with the other high schools in the county. They asked that more teachers be employed and the curriculum be enlarged to include home economics, business courses and that more academic subjects be taught. The request was indorsed by the McLean School and Civic League and the local volunteer fire department.

A request from the Herndon Parent-Teacher Association was presented in which is was asked that the school board provide at least two more rooms, additional teachers, adequate heating facilities for the home economics and commercial building, and to have the heating pipes in the main building covered with asbestos. The town council and town school board indorsed the request.

A delegation from Woodlawn appeared before the board urging the purchase of an 11-acre school site in that community. They pointed to the rapid growth in that area and to the over-crowded conditions already existing in Mount Vernon District. They declared a new school building should be erected there as soon as possible, avering that about 200 children are now being transported to other sections of the district. The present dilapidated Woodlawn school does not even take care of the pupils attending the four grades that are now being taught there.

A delegation from the Franconia community appeared asking the school board to provide two additional classrooms at the Franconia school. They cited the rapid growth of the school and the real estate development now taking place in the community. The school was built four years ago and while two additional rooms were erected last year, the enrollment has overcrowded the building. According to a census taken recently by the citizens, the enrollment next fall will be in excess of the present year.

Funds Unavailable.

Members of the board stated they realized the condition in each community and the justification of their requests but at the present time there were no funds available for school-building purposes and it was doubtful if funds could be obtained now.

Mayor W. Lindsay Carne, of Fairfax, Va., has resigned and the town council has named former Mayor Thomas P. Chapman to succeed him. The appointment of Mayor Chapman has been approved by Judge Walter T. McCarthy of the Fairfax County Circuit Court.

In resigning, Mayor Carne expressed his doubt as to the legality of the local PWA sewer project. The town now has under construction a $100,000 sewerage system financed partially through a Federal grant.

Democrat Club Of Alexandria Denounces Bill

Condemns Rosenberg Proposal for Election of 2 City Officials.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The Young Democrats Club of Alexandria, which did much to elect Maurice D. Rosenberg to the State Legislature, last night adopted a resolution strongly condemning Rosenberg's bill to change the city charter to make the offices of city collector and city attorney elective rather than appointive.

The condemnatory resolution was adopted, with only a few dissenting votes. Copies will be sent to Rosenberg and other members of the Legislature.

It was pointed out at the meeting that the only organization which has indorsed Rosenberg's bill is the Young Republicans Club.

Robert Duncan was re-elected president of the Young Democrats Club. Others elected were Clyde C. Lamond, jr., first vice president; Mrs. Margaret Bailey, second vice president; Cary Randolph, third vice president; Mrs. Mae Bowman, fourth vice president; Mrs. Alice Burgess, secretary; Ralph Hephurn, treasurer, and James Moriarty, sergeant at arms.

The Alexandria School Board has selected February 25 as the date for the dedicatory exercises of the new George Washington High School. Superintendent of Schools T. C. Williams is arranging the program of entertainment.

State School Architect Raymond V. Long, designer of the building, will be present. A musical program will be under the direction of Fred Petitt, president of the high school alumni. City officials will participate in the program.

Walter T. Cline is circulating a petition in the Third Ward for candidacy for the city council from that ward, making three in the field. Charles M. Stump and Walter S. Smith have already announced.

It was learned that William F. Kirwan will enter the primary from the Sixth Ward, opposing the incumbent, Charles L. Burgess.

The annual banquet of Potomac Lodge, No. 38, Odd Fellows, will be held today at 7 p. m. in Odd Fellows Hall. Approximately 200 are expected to attend. The banquet will be served by members of Liberty Rebekah Lodge No. 16.

The funeral of J. Christopher, veteran policeman, who died Wednesday, will be held tomorrow at 3 p. m. from the home, 118 South Lee street. The Rev. Percy Foster Hall, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, will conduct the service, and burial will be in Bethel Cemetery.

Representative Fred M. Vinson, of Kentucky, will be the speaker at the meeting of Alexandria Post, No. 24, American Legion, to be held today at 8 p. m. in Gadsby's Tavern. Department Commander Frank Rennie, of Richmond, has been invited to be present.

Sydney C. Cross, high priest of Mount Vernon Royal Arch Chapter, No. 14, has announced a stated convocation of that body for 7:30 o'clock tonight in the chapter rooms of the Masonic Temple in Cameron street. All Royal Arch Masons are invited.

Policeman Gordon L. Sanders was taken to the Alexandria Hospital yesterday and operated upon for a strain sustained when he made an arrest Wednesday night.

St. Mary's Academy has announced the following results of the midyear examinations, with the 100 per cent classes for January as follows:

Personal property tax schedules are being mailed to Montgomery County residents by order of the Montgomery County Commissioners at the request of the State Tax Commission. Residents who fail to fill out and return the schedules in ten days will be assessed an arbitrary amount and failure to appear at a hearing date set by the commissioners will automatically place the assessment in effect.

The commissioners were notified formally that the Postal Telegraph-Cable Co. had withdrawn its assessment appeal. Sheriff G. Edington Bell reported he had collected costs amounting to $228 in January.

Mrs. John H. Werner, of Chevy Chase, submitted her resignation as a member of the Advisory Welfare Board to the county commissioners yesterday. The board approved purchase of $37,000 in Frostburg, Md., 4 per cent water improvement bonds for the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission sinking fund.

Reduction of the Maryland liquor tax from $1.10 to 50 cents per gallon was urged by the Montgomery County Liquor Control Board yesterday at the weekly meeting of the board of county commissioners.

The tax reduction was one of seven amendments in the local liquor law requested by the control board for inclusion in the legislative program to be sponsored by the board in the approaching special session of the Maryland General Assembly.

The other items in the program include changing the hours for the retail sale of beer, including extension of the evening closing time to 2 a. m.; permit brewers and distributors of beer to sell direct to retailers instead of through the county dispensary system; exempt dispensary receipts from the State gross receipts tax; permit retail sale of wines with an alcoholic content up to 21 per cent; permit license holders to change type of license without additional advertisements, and permit the liquor control board to pay its own bills and deposit its gross receipts with the county treasurer each month.

Mrs. Lee S. Tillotson, of Chevy Chase, has been elected president of the new Parent-Teachers Association of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School, which completed its organization this week. Other officers elected were George W. Bryan, Somerset, vice president; Clifford A. Wilkins, Cabin John, treasurer, and Miss Shehan, of the school faculty, secretary. The following committees have been appointed by the new president:

Membership, Mal. D. E. Murphy, chairman. Mrs. R. Granville Curry, Mrs. Oliver Owen Kuhn, W. M. Pace, Dr. A. M. Stimson, H. S. Clemmer, Oliver H. Glah, J. B. Scott, Porter Taylor, Mrs Paul Appleby, H. W. Chalkley, Mrs. Frederic P. Lee, Mrs. W. A. Warthen. Mrs. C. A. Slaughter and J. F. Moran; building, James V. Bennett, chairman, A. W. Smith and A. A. Dickinson; program, Norman B. Ames, chairman, Mrs. W. E. Chambers and Mrs. G. A. Warthen.

Judge Charles W. Woodward, of the Montgomery County Circuit Court, yesterday granted an absolute divorce to James H. Stone, of Chevy Chase, from his wife, Mrs. Dorothy Elizabeth Stone, of Washington. In his petition, Stone charged that his wife deserted him more than three years ago. They were married in Washington on August 2, 1929, and have no children.

The Maryland State Legislature will face two problems regarding the relief situation in Montgomery County, Miss Ruth Shoemaker, member of the House of Delegates, told a meeting of the government study group of the Takoma Park Women's Club yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. John B. Mertie, jr., Sligo Park Hills.

Miss Shoemaker stated that the Legislature will have to solve the raising of revenue to carry on relief services and whether it should be a State or county project. She discussed the situation of relief conditions in Montgomery County as they were, as well as what is being done in the last year.

A change in the Montgomery County government which would give the suburban areas greater representation on the board of commissioners was advocated in a resolution introduced at last night's meeting of the Silver Spring Citizens Association. It was warmly received and referred to the executive committee.

The resolution, which stated that the Bethesda and Wheaton election districts pay five-eighths of real and personal taxes, three quarters of securities taxes, contain three-fifths of the county's population, and yet have only two commissioners to the rural districts' three, advocated that there be three commissioners, two representing the suburban areas and the third the remainder of the county.

Another resolution, which would have put the association on record as favoring a merit system for county workers because the present partial "spoils system" is costly and inefficient, was likewise referred to the executive committee for study and report.

A community celebration in commemoration of Abraham Lincoln will be held Monday at 7:45 p. m. at the Takoma Park Baptist Church, Piney Branch road, Takoma Park, D. C.

A special program is being arranged by the Rev. William E. La Rue, pastor, and Walter Irey, clerk of the church. An address on the life of Lincoln by Frederick B. Linton, an authority on the life of the President, will be a feature.

Guests of honor at the affair will be officers of the Takoma Park Women's Club, the Takoma Citizens, the Takoma Park Community League, Boy Scout Troop, No. 36 and the Citizens Association of Takoma Park, D. C.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Glen Echo Fire Department will hold a card party in conjunction with the showing of the new voting machines at the fire hall tonight at 8 o'clock.

Proceeds from the card party given by the Cabin John Citizens Association last night will be used for the benefit of the dental clinic in the Glen Echo-Cabin John School. Prizes were won by Mrs. D. T. Etzler and Mr. P. T. Hannen.

Funeral services for Marjorie Ann Beavers, 6-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick D. Beavers, of Silver Spring, Md., will be held today at 9:30 a. m. at St. Michael's Catholic Church, the Rev. Thomas A. Calnan officiating. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery. The child, who was a pupil in the first grade of the East Silver Spring School, died Tuesday at Children's Hospital after a brief illness.

Berwyn Group Will Study Plan To Incorporate

Area of Square Mile Has 500 Population; Meeting to Be Held Monday.

A report on the proposed incorporation of the "Berwyn proper" section will be the high light of the regular monthly meeting of the Berwyn (Md.) District Civic Association Monday at 8 p. m., in the school.

The area which it is proposed to incorporate consists roughly of the territory south of the Branchville road and north of the Lakeland road, as laid out by a special committee appointed by T. Raymond Burch, president of the association.

According to the original plan, the proposed incorporation area included Berwyn, Branchville, Daniels Park and Hollywood. Opposition expressed at a mass meeting last week, however, decided the sponsors of the project to limit the territory involved to "Berwyn proper," comprising about 1 square mile with a population of about 500. Property under consideration is assessed at about $850,000.

With a large advance sale of tickets, indications are that the ball and card party Tuesday, February 18, at Maryland Club Gardens for the benefit of the crippled children of Prince Georges County will be a marked success. The entire fund to be spent in the county for braces, shoes, crutches and other orthopedic appliances.

Co-operating in the affair are the Prince Georges County Kiwanis Club, the Rotary Club of College Park, the County Exchange Club, the County Medical Society, American Legion posts, the County Federation of Women's Clubs and faculty and students of the University of Maryland. Tickets are being sold throughout the county at $1 each.

Dr. T. B. Symons, director of the University of Maryland Extension Service, was one of the principal speakers yesterday in New York at the Poultry Industries Exposition.

Speaking on the subject, "The Significance of Regional Commodity Organization," Dr. Symons emphasized the rapid and general establishment of uniform grades, which he termed "the keynote to successful merchandising of any product." He urged the poultrymen to develop a regional consciousness in their industry.

The Southern Prince Georges Citizens Association met Wednesday night at Surrattsville High School. William A. Roberts, people's counsel of the District, addressed the meeting on utility matters affecting the county.

Zoning matters were discussed and a committee appointed, headed by Hugh C. Bickford, of Clinton, to investigate and confer with the park and planning commission. A committee with W. G. Copley as chairman was named to study the proposal of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. to install a central exchange at Silver Hill.

A card party for the benefit of the new auditorium at the Olive street elementary school in Hyattsville will be held today at 8 p. m. in the school. In charge is a committee of mothers of grade school children.

Clogged Valve Cuts Arlington Water Supply

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 500. Clarendon, Va.

Approximately one-third of the population of Arlington County was without water about breakfast time yesterday as a result of a stuck valve in a 20-inch main on the Lee highway at Donaldson street. The area effected for about two and one-half hours included Cherrydale, sections of Clarendon, Ballston, Lyon Park, Ashton Heights and Lyon Village.

The trouble was remedied by a force of county workmen who have for several days been called to thaw meters at more than 100 homes in various sections of the county.

The Young Democratic Club of Arlington County is sponsoring a charity ball for the Arlington Hospital fund tomorrow night at the Mayflower Hotel, Washington. Dancing will be from 10 to 1. Leon Turnburke, general chairman, is being assisted by Clara Dyson, Mrs. Freeland F. Chew, Charles Meyer, Walter U. Varney and Dr. John H. Gilligan on arrangements.

Boy Scout Troop, No. 103, of Lyon Village will hold its annual "father-and-son" banquet at 6:30 o'clock at the Community Methodist Church at Aurora Heights.

300 Vow Support For Trinity Drive

A campaign to raise $35,000 for a new edifice for Trinity Episcopal Church was opened last night in the parish hall, Piney Branch road and Dahlia street, Takoma Park. The original 45-year-old building had to be razed because of damage inflicted by termites.

Three hundred persons attended the campaign dinner and pledged their efforts to raise money. C. A. Hoglund, chairman of the building committee, announced the rector and the vestry had contributed $1,800.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, gave his blessing to the drive and declared the parish is one of the most important in the city. The Rev. Reno S. Harpe, rector of Trinity, sketched the history of the church since its organization in 1887. John Waterfield, superintendent of the church school, spoke on behalf of the younger parishioners, pledging their support. Herbert D. Lawson, senior warder, was toastmaster.

SHIP YOUR CAR
Santa Fe
to enjoy at destination while you ride in comfort by rail
Sound reasoning by travelers steadily increases the number of private motors shipped to California or the Southwest by Santa Fe Fast Freight, while owners themselves travel by train.
There's the obvious joy of having one's own car at destination; the record low cost and simplicity of shipment; the saving of precious days en route; avoidance of uncertain expense, fatigue, and the tricks of winter roads and weather.
When owner's party holds two or more first-class one-way or round-trip rail tickets, extra cost of shipping the car is only 3.6c per mile. (Minimum charge between any two points, $54 for auto and two passengers.)

Only One Solution.

The only pleasing aspect of the most recent airport tangle is the stirring up of Congress into action. For years, now, the Department of Commerce, the Postoffice Department, air transport companies, the flying public, District officials and the press have been clamoring for a modern airport to serve Washington. But Congress has merely muddled along without coming to any clear decision. Now it finds itself chagrined by the prospective elimination of the Capital City from the country's network of air transport lines.

Unquestionably that section of Military road which bisects the airport ought to be closed. Nevertheless elimination of that traffic artery will impose a hardship on a considerable number of Arlington County residents. The proper solution is obviously a new road which will not endanger the lives of motorists and fliers every time a plane takes off. But such a project cannot be reasonably undertaken until Congress has decided whether or not the proposed national airport is to be developed on the site now in use.

The effect of this relatively minor issue, therefore, is to re-emphasize the importance of pressing for action on the larger problem of building a permanent airport. At best the bill to authorize the closing of Military road will be a stopgap. It should be followed by a measure to end the protracted squabble over airport sites, and to authorize the development of a terminal comparable to those already possessed by foreign capitals and by virtually every large city in this country. Any lesser step would merely afford an anticlimax to the farce which has been dragging on for approximately a decade.

Landscape In Oils.

It was bad enough when the Texas Rangers took to high hats and tails. It was even more disillusioning, recently, when the descendants of the roistering, cutlass-carrying Bounty mutineers wrote from Pitcairn Island requesting, of all things, sewing machine needles! But the denouement came last week when Oklahomans decided to beautify their oil fields.

The idea, as laid out by State officials, is to give the ugly, sprawling, oil-reeking areas in Oklahoma City the appearance of delicately informal gardens. No more ungainly derricks, no more steam or rude noises, no more offensive slush pits. The esthetic sense of the burly drillers is to be safeguarded. Cute little hedges and ducky potted plants will lend a country club touch to the landscape. Oil scum is to be scented with perfume, and a workman's wife will have to get used to a husband who comes home at night reeking of jasmine or lily of the valley. Eventually the excitement of a new gusher will take on the thrill of the first spring crocus.

As yet there are no rumors of serving tea each afternoon to the drillers, or of substituting Dresden china dinner pails for those of tin. This refinement of crude oil fields has not gone that far. It is, rather, a logical sequence of beautification efforts which the oil industry has heretofore tended to confine to the engraving of its stock certificates.

The District Tax Problem.

Opposition by local citizens' associations to any new taxes in the District can be easily understood. A substantial surplus in the local budget is estimated for 1937. Because of the Federal Budget Bureau's arbitrary slashing of the estimates prepared by the District Commissioners, it does not appear that the city will be allowed to acquire any substantial portion of its much-needed improvements next year. In the circumstances new taxes might only encourage Congress to take another slice from the Federal contribution.

Nevertheless, blanket opposition to any increase in local taxes puts Washington citizens in an unfortunate position. For that is merely a negative stand, while the city greatly needs positive action in the solution of its fiscal problems. Tax adjustments should follow, and not precede, a complete understanding between the Federal and local governments as to an allowance to finance national functions of the Capital City. But every taxpayer should realize that when this has been done, local residents will have to pay for the municipal improvements which the city so urgently needs.

Instead of merely opposing new levies, therefore, it would seem to be far more in keeping with the community interests to emphasize the changes which should precede tax revision, leaving the latter issue for settlement when the prospective expenditures of the next few years can be more accurately appraised. A merely negative attitude on the part of citizens tends to strengthen the negative attitude on Capitol Hill and thus delay any constructive change in the present inequitable set-up.

The Strike At Pekin.

Some of the factors which entered into the general strike at Pekin are obscure at this distance, but the chief principle involved stands out with unusual clarity. The strikers used their combined power to paralyze an entire community of 17,000 inhabitants. The source of both food and fuel were choked in an effort to force the dismissal of the chief of police. In reality this was not a strike, but an embryonic revolt.

Organized labor in this Illinois town has effectively demonstrated its power. Apparently working groups in this vicinity have carefully solidified their ranks for the common purpose of dealing collectively with their employers. To that extent their efforts have been useful and constructive. When the employes of a distilling company walked out several days ago because of a dispute with the management, they were exercising a right that has been thoroughly established in law and practice. But when this union, with the aid of 31 other crafts, attempted to enforce a political edict by intimidation, it went far beyond any reasonable prerogative of collective bargaining. Its arbitrary assumption of power became a menace to the peace of the community.

Issues in the original controversy were completely overshadowed by the ultimatum which implied that Pekin residents would be starved unless Chief of Police Donahue were ousted. Charges that the police used tear gas against strikers unnecessarily may or may not be well-founded. If, after a careful investigation, Donahue is found to have maliciously discriminated against the strikers, his usefulness as police chief will be ended. But it would have been impossible for the city authorities to dismiss him under the pressure of a general strike, without confessing subservience to sort of unofficial super-government.

When labor unions thus attempt to dictate public policy they undermine their own cause by challenging governmental authority instead of unsatisfactory conditions of labor. The fact that the leaders in this case receded from their unreasonable position after a brief struggle suggests that they recognize their blunder. Nevertheless, the tactics used at Pekin indicate a distressing lack of discipline and responsibility on the part of labor organizations. In many respects that is the weakest aspect of the labor movement. The acquisition of vast power by any organization ought to be accompanied by a sense of obligation to use that power constructively under all circumstances. Where that responsibility is lacking other safeguards, which are always less satisfactory, must necessarily be set up.

Traffic And City Planning.

Selection of a site for the War Department Building may appear to be a routine matter of interest chiefly to those who will erect and occupy this $20,000,000 structure. Actually it will affect the interests of a great majority of Washingtonians; for the city planning of today determines the traffic problems of tomorrow, and, consequently, in some degree, the habits of the people.

The consensus of opinion is that the Government made a grave mistake in the intense development of the Pennsylvania Avenue-Mall triangle with apparently little thought of traffic facilities. Acute congestion in this area will likely plague the city for many years. Already the difficulties encountered are sufficient to arouse apprehension over proposals that other sections of the city be similarly developed.

Choice of the squares bounded by C and E, Twenty-first and Twenty-third streets as the site for the new War Department Building is especially important because it carries one step further development of the so-called rectangle, north of Potomac Park. In this area the new Interior Building is in the course of construction and erection of a home for the Navy Department has been proposed. It would be easy to repeat in this section the mistakes of the triangle.

Fortunately, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission contemplates more open spaces in the rectangle. The buildings now approved for erection there will not be so close together, and some space for storage of automobiles will be provided. Garages in the new Interior Building will accommodate only 350 cars, however, less than one-fourth of the number estimated to be in daily use by employes who will occupy that building. Somewhat more parking space is planned for the War Department Building, but still there will be a large overflow of automobiles that will have to be parked on the streets unless other space can be found.

Solution of the problem thus raised is not a simple matter. Utilization of space in expensive Government buildings for storage of automobiles must necessarily be limited because of its cost. Outside parking lots are frowned upon because they detract from the beauty of the landscape. One solution may be depressed parking areas hidden from view by banks and shrubs. The Park and Planning Commission is studying this and other plans to take a large number of automobiles off the streets. But even if it is successful, attention may well be given to plans for greater decentralization of governmental structures.

A Blessing In Disguise.

During the past two years over $2,800,000,000 of gold has been imported into the United States. This inflow has been partly due to repatriation of American capital. But to a large extent it has resulted from transfers of foreign funds for investment or safekeeping. "Nervous" capital of this sort has been shifting from country to country ever since post-war political and economic disasters began to play havoc with orderly exchange relationships. Such unstable balances are likely to be withdrawn as quickly and as unexpectedly as they are acquired, with resultant reversals of gold movements.

That possibility was brought to the attention of the American people by the sudden weakening of dollar exchange following passage of the bonus bill and renewed fears of currency inflation. It has been emphasized by a sudden, if small, outflow of gold which should be a timely reminder to our congressional inflation bloc that the huge gold stocks now held by the Treasury are not necessarily a permanent possession. This may help to explain the folly of dallying with fiat money proposals which pretend that currency can be safely issued against fluctuating monetary gold stocks.

Even if new currency issues to finance bonus payments were to be limited to amounts fully covered by the gold profits from dollar devaluation, they would be irredeemable paper differing in no essential respect from other kinds of fiat money. The notes would find their way back into the banks, moreover, and add to the dangerously large volume of excess reserves. Foreign alarm would not be allayed by such specious endeavors to conceal the inflationary character of the operation.

If an outflow of gold had started because of renewed confidence in the gold bloc currencies, it would be a welcome development, since a loss of gold operates to cut down the dangerously high excess reserves of our member banks. Indeed, the possibility of such an outflow has been advanced as an excuse for the failure of the Federal Reserve Board to exercise its powers to reduce such reserves.

Reversal of a gold movement which has added huge sums to the lending resources of our banks and made possible a credit expansion of appalling proportions is a cause for rejoicing rather than anxiety. It is especially to be welcomed if it puts a quietus upon proposals to print money against the security of gold stocks, liable to be withdrawn at any time and certain to be removed, barring official bans upon export of gold, if the printing press is set to work.

Athens In Ruins.

It would be unfortunate if the hundreds of people who are now reading "The Last Puritan," George Santayana's philosophy in the form of a novel, should fail to realize that the city of which he writes is not the Boston of the present, but the Boston that was already dying when Henry Adams set out to gain his education.

This thought arises upon reading in the press that "a swift fleet of Army bombers and attack planes theoretically destroyed the city" in a publicity stunt designed to prove to the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, a gaudy group of ardent rifle carriers and paraders, that the air force is inadequate to defend the Nation from destruction at the hands of undefined enemies.

Alas, that the Army should have chosen Boston! For there are those who have watched the Athens of America slide downward from its once proud height until now it is but a parish of that Kingfish of Jamaica Pond, James Michael Curley. Once proud of its freedom, once determined that nothing should destroy its liberalism, the Boston of Faneuil Hall, of the Athenaeum, of the Evening Transcript, Harvard College and other institutions dedicated to free thought and free speech in a free country, is now but another province of demagoguery, a fief of embryonic fascism.

Once its teachers walked as proud freemen; now their heads are bowed with the weight of insult as they mumble oaths of helot allegiance to a flag they had always thought needed no lip service from true patriots. Alas for Boston, whose citizens may read only books that are "pure;" see only plays its mayor can understand!

It is not bombs from the air that threaten destruction to Boston. The city has already been leveled by forces within its walls—complacent "Puritans" who were content with past glories and made no move to preserve this great heritage until it was too late. No army can be of value in the defense of culture already degraded by the smug and ignorant forces of the commonplace.

Civil Service Promotion.

From the Detroit News.

Civil service, since it wars with political spoilsmanship, will thrive only when the people insist that both political parties stand equally committed to support it; also that they stand by their commitments. Only when civil service is freed at last from the threat of partisan raids may it develop into a true merit system and thus realize its full promise of economy, efficiency and decency in public service.

We heartily commend the aspiration of the League of Women Voters to have both major political parties declare in their national platforms for abolition of the spoils system and for civil service. We congratulate the league on its unflagging interest in this cause.

From the public's standpoint, civil service is best treated as a nonpartisan and not a partisan issue. The public must make it, not merely good politics to advocate civil service, but very bad politics to oppose or undermine it.

But Christmas Is A Long Way Off!

Letters To The Editor.

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the Editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

Massachusetts Stands.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A very small sense of fairness was shown when you permitted the editorial, "New England Conscience," to appear in the January 29th issue of your paper.

Why all this malicious, unprovoked and unnecessary attack on the New England conscience? The answer is—lack of understanding of both the past and present problems of the settlers of New England. Those who attack the efforts of those determined and energetic pioneers could never summon enough courage to face the problems with which these people wrestled in those early days. Few of their maligning critics would have had enough intelligence and hardihood to survive those problems if they were forced to undergo them as a temporary experiment. We'd soon hear them whimper.

"Puritanically blue-nosed" is the epithet showered upon the honorable general court of the Massachusetts Bay colony, one of whose cardinal sins seems to be the resolution which expelled Roger Williams, because, as the editorial says, "he subscribed to the heresy that the civil powers have no jurisdiction over a man's conscience." This sentence imposed by the court of the Bay colony, at that time, was a merciful one compared to the bloody ones dealt out by the courts of less "puritanically blue-nosed" countries for like heresies. Countries, no doubt, whose outpouring of just sentences, the writer of the editorial has neglected to weigh in the same scale as that in which he has measured the "New England Conscience."

The editorial further states "The same Massachusetts Legislature has passed a law forcing all teachers in that Commonwealth to subscribe by oath to a ritualistic patriotic incantation drafted by moronic superpatriots." Ritualistic patriotic incantation! Moronic superpatriots! Indeed! The people of Massachusetts are not in any sense "mofonic superpatriots"—but they are patriots—don't forget that! The history of America testifies to it. What to you seems to be "ritualistic patriotic incantation" is living protection of American ideals and respect and reverence for the sacrifices of those who gave their lives to help bring this Nation into birth! Say what you will of Massachusetts and her "ritualistic patriotic incantation," but one thing is certain, like a wise mother, she does not place a sharp knife in the midst of her offspring and tempt them to try it out upon her. There is nothing moronically superpatriotic in that conduct. On the contrary, it is supremely wise.

The writer of the editorial ends by saying "it would be more to the point if the Bay State would revoke the latter statute before rectifying the persecution of three centuries ago." It is always to that point that an injustice be rectified, and it is to the credit of Massachusetts that she is publicly willing to make what amends she can for the unjust expulsion of Roger Williams, while at the same time attempting to preserve American ideals which he would gladly embrace were he here with us today.

GEORGIA WOODBURY.
Washington, Feb. 5.

"North By South."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At least one of the brickbats that may not be thrown at Mrs. Roosevelt is he is lacking in the finer arts of political tightrope walking.

He has shown almost a genius for reaching the North Pole by steering south. His action on the bonus question is typical. Had he been conscientiously committed to a policy of non-payment of the bonus he should have gone to Congress with a personal and strongly worded note of warning that the country faced a critical financial situation. He didn't. He chose rather to receive the bill in due course, as a matter of routine, knowing that his veto would be overriden. "Oh, Odessyeus, where are thy wiles?" How easy to make use of the veteran vote, and still be pure in the eyes of the people who will have to foot the bills.

Again he, by beating the Supreme Court to bat, has requested Congress to nullify the Bankhead act, the tobacco and potato acts. Genius, pure genius. He can now go to the voters and say, "See how Constitutional we are. We have deliberately cut the throat of one of our pet measures for your well being, because of its alleged unconstitutionality." This will please the conservatives who still like the Constitution, and make the potential profiteers, who have "vested interests" in the measures noted, look around for some way of "circumnavigating" the Constitution and hamstringing the Supreme Court.

C. J. SMITH.
Washington, Feb. 2.

The Attorney General's Office.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The local papers appear to be timid in writing about Cabinet officers although quick to denounce Congress en bloc or individually. This is the reason I write heartiest approval of the editorial in The Post headed, "New Task for A. G."

When Smith made his attack on the Administration the town speculated as to who might be chosen to answer. Picking Robinson emphasized the sterility of the Cabinet, without a man today who enjoys the confidence of the American people. The Postmaster General gloats over the common fact that he is a politician. He could no more answer Smith than a night club crooner could rival Bobby Burns.

The Attorney General should be the spokesman for the President in the Supreme Court and on the political platform, in writing a legal brief or a literary comment. Because both qualities are missing at the present time, The Post does well to demand the obvious rehabilitation of the office of the A. G.

Able lawyers are not wanted about justice. National committeemen of attractive manners and free spending habits are more agreeable companions than men whose talk is liable to be about constitutional questions. Of course the Attorney General should resign forthwith as The Post says and in his place a lawyer chosen who is interested in the law rather than in the selection of postoffice sites.

A North Dakota View.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I should like to bring to the attention of your readers the opinion of the farmers of North Dakota on the repeal of the AAA. I am quoting from the letter of a man of high standing in the State, who was born and brought up in North Dakota.

Under the Constitution, the AAA gave them a small sum as innovations, a straight path to communism or fascism. I am proud of the members of the Court that held it void. The farmers here are good citizens and realized that although the AAA gave them a small sum as a dole—everything else they had to buy had gone up in price—the result being they were no better off than before. The farmers are satisfied with the decision of the Court and have faith in our form of government. VOX POPULI.

Replies To Thomas Dixon.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just read in The Post of February 1, a letter signed by Thomas Dixon, in which the author of "The Birth of a Nation" characterizes the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People as "the most dangerous Communist organization in America." I request The Post to publish with prominence equal to that given to Mr. Dixon's letter, a statement characterizing this assertion as a complete falsehood.

Mr. Dixon, who boasts the somewhat dubious honor of being responsible for the film which played a part in the revival of the infamous Ku Klux Klan, indulges, both in his recent speech at Macon and in this letter to The Post, in a practice popular nowadays with demagogues and reactionaries of labeling everything he disagrees with as "Communist" or "red."

If working incessantly for 26 years, as the N. A. A. C. P. has done, for the impartial enforcement of the Federal Constitution, and if unceasing opposition to lynching, disfranchisement, race prejudice and Kukluxary is "communism," then the venerable Mr. Dixon is right. It is too bad Mr. Dixon doesn't read the Daily Worker and other Communist publications and familiarize himself with the bitter denunciation of the N. A. A. C. P. which they have waged for a number of years.

And what a shock it must be to Senator Arthur Capper, Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, Prof. Manley O. Hudson, High Commissioner Frank Murphy of the Philippines, Col. Arthur W. Little, Dr. William Allan Neilson and other members of the board of directors of the N. A. A. C. P. to learn from Mr. Dixon what he alone apparently knows: that the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is "Communist."

Mr. Dixon really ought to get around more and learn what is actually going on in the country before he makes any more speeches or writes any more letters to The Post.

WALTER WHITE,
Secretary, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.
New York, Feb. 5.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Thomas Dixon need not regard Mrs. Roosevelt's indorsement of the Costigan-Wagner antilynching bill as an "astounding performance." For many years Mrs. Roosevelt has been interested in progressive legislation for the welfare of women and children, the improvement of the condition of workers, for the promotion of education and peace and the assurance of civil rights to all citizens regardless of race—all questions of national importance. Her courage and work had won the admiration of millions long before her husband was elected President.

At the same time that he condemns her beliefs and her right to express them, Mr. Dixon proclaims his chivalry to "a lady."

Mr. Dixon, too, has long been known as an eloquent speaker and a forceful writer, but there has never come to my attention any protest from him against the mob that tortured and killed Mary Turner and her unborn child. His code as an "old-time Southerner" does not extend chivalry to women with black skin. America's lynching record for 50 years is now close to 5,100, but Mr. Dixon describes attempts to curb this crime through Federal legislation as "an insult to the people of the South."

Entire families of share-croppers, colored and white, have been evicted from the plantations on which they have worked because they have organized for the improvement of their condition. They are living in tents now or are driven from State to State, suffering such need, such persecution as surpass belief. Mr. Dixon inflames racial hatreds for their continued oppression and exploitation, ignoring the fact that degraded conditions for so great a per cent of our population affects us all.

Periodically we hear of callous carelessness and medieval cruelties inflicted upon prisoners, breaking into the headlines through some tragedy like last week's burning of a score of men. In all these years, Mr. Dixon with his rare gifts of expression might have accomplished much for prison reform, but he gazes longingly into the past and glorifies a parasitic civilization.

These injustices and many others are realities in America today and the struggle for their eradication is not against the people of any section but for the people of all America.

Ten Below At A Skyland Camp.

Post Office, Friday.

WE were grumbling against February in the town when we received the following piece, from John C. Rogers, about February in the country. Rogers knows what a CCC camp is like. We wish we could publish his accompanying illustrations. Almost as much as the text, they reduced our discontent with our urban lot.

Elmer Scuttle (writes Rogers) picked the rocks out of his bunk, one by one. They were only small rocks, but they made mountains upon a bunk.

It was a good thing he'd discovered them before inspection; the horror of that thought sent imaginative shivers up his spine. Maybe the major would have sat on the bed. Or maybe the captain would have. Or that slow-witted company clerk. The clerk was the worst of the lot: He would probably have yelled to the high heavens, pointed a wavering finger at Elmer—got him a week of KP for a joke he had no hand in.

Elmer threw the rocks out of the door. A chorus of yells and ribald comments greeted his action: "Lettin' in the cold!" You would think the delicate enrollees were freezing to death. Really they just wanted something to gripe about.

After all, it was only ten below . . .

Elmer thumbed his nose at them.

Well, anyway, a taxi couldn't hit you.

Elmer tried to borrow a pair of socks: his good ones were dirty, and the clean ones could be put on from either end. He got a pair from Slewfoot Bailey. Slewfoot impressed upon him the fact that this was only a loan. By way of retort, Elmer recalled that Slewfoot still had Elmer's toothpaste, which he had borrowed through the simple method of unscrewing the hinges from Elmer's locker. Slewfoot seemed properly squelched.

* * *

Elmer sat on his locker-box and picked up the volume of Robert Service's verses. In the city, he would read Proust, or Hemingway, or Zola, or some book by an author whose name he couldn't pronounce. In camp, he went back to Robert Service—but he had managed to keep away from Edgar Guest . . .

"The Northern Lights have seen queer sights,
But queerest they ever did see
Was that night on the marge of Lake Lebarge
I cremated Sam McGee."

Winter is a subdued season. Winter freezes your intellect and energy . . .

A year ago at this time, Elmer was sitting in the kitchen of the farmhouse, playing classical music on a portable, when he was paid a visit by Uncle Joe Blevins, who lived up the hollow a piece—where he put all the berry, corn and fruit juices into jugs, and only used corncobs for stoppers. Uncle Joe gave him a pint of apple-juice that had become harder than water in a chicken-pan. Elmer fed the stove a couple of pieces of chestnut-rail and opened the drafts and dragged the ash-bucket out as a bait—to see if he could keep Uncle Joe from spitting all over the stove.

"Hit hain't no fun spittin' in no ash-bucket," said Uncle Joe. "Ah wants mah terbaccy to fizzle instid of a-ploppin'."

Elmer shoved the bucket back under the stove. Habit was a hard thing to break, and Elmer was no missionary.

"Ah suppose hit's alright fer yew," said Uncle Joe; "but iffen yew aim to be a-playin' thet phonygraph fer both of us, Ah'd jes' as soon yew take off thet-there high-falutin music en' squawkin' en' give us some of that-there hen-scratchin' music Ah kin understand."

Elmer switched to "Twenty-One Years," "She'll Be Coming 'Round the Mountain" and "Birmingham Jail." You had to adjust yourself, like a cat, to different environments. Besides, he was quite fed up on classical music.

After he'd had several cups of tea diluted with blackberry brandy, he began to convince Uncle Joe that he only played classical music because city folks expected him to. Folks were always posing in the city. They accepted things because they considered it was the fashion to do so, and not because they enjoyed them. They were afraid to be natural.

Uncle Joe told him to take a hot toddy before he went to bed, and he would feel better in the morning. Uncle Joe was——

A whistle disturbed Elmer's reminiscences:

"In No. 2 Barracks!" yelled Slewfoot. "Hide thet damn' book afore the major pokes his head in. Old Brass-Hat 'ull make yuh peel spuds fer a week if he catches yuh reading poetry, yuh dumb bozo!"

Elmer poked the book behind the locker box. He thought better of it and tucked the book under the mattress. Last week, they had to drag the locker boxes out to the front of their bunks.

Cash On Command.

London, Feb. 6.

THE King of England gets about $5,000,000 a year, out of which he must pay the expenses of his office, including grocery bills, servants, wages, donations and all such costs as other people have to contend with, except rent.

Benito Mussolini and Adolf Hitler receive no stipulated salary but simply help themselves out of the safe whenever they find themselves in need of cash, which is seldom. Probably a strict account of the pay of the dictators would reveal that in cash figures they draw less than day laborers, because everything that money can buy is provided for them and they never have occasion to do any personal shopping.

Another reason why the dictators have no interest in money is the fact that they know too much about their kind of money to place any great values upon it. They control the printing presses, and no man can retain a great respect for money who is in a position to telephone the Bureau of Printing and Engraving an order to print a million lire or marks and send it over.

• • • •

The Continental people have had some fantastic experiences with money in the last 20 years, and the only rule which they can accept is that money is worth just what it will buy at a given time.

It is hardly likely that Mussolini and Hitler ever pay cash for anything, because they are the state, and every commodity which is supplied to them and every service rendered them are chargeable to the state, not to the dictators themselves. It may be that, like ex-King Alfonso of Spain and the late Alexander of Yugoslavia, they have planted some gold or foreign securities or currency in Paris or London as a precaution against accidents, but that seems very unlikely, for they appear to be indifferent to material possessions.

• • • •

LIKE the English King, they are guaranteed every comfort and luxury they may desire as long as they hold office, and if they should ever fall money would be the least of their worries. Mussolini has a numerous family and thus sets an example to the people, who are urged to do likewise and penalized for failure to do so.

Hitler, as a bachelor and celibate, is in a curious position before his people because he, too, adjures marriage and propagation but sets them no example on bachelordom in the person of the German ideal and demigod.

Although both dictators address their appeal principally to the common people, neither of them makes any pretense of sharing the humble comfort and fare of the forgotten man. I have not seen Hitler's living quarters but understand that they are quite luxurious, and from an outside view of Mussolini's so-called villa and his palace I feel qualified to say that he has plenty to eat and a good bed in a comfortable room.

Neither one eats much, however, and they both shun tobacco and alcohol, so actually the cost of keeping body and soul together is not as great as their official splendor would suggest.

• • • •

IN Rome nobody knows how much Mussolini sends home to the little woman, but she lives quietly and the greatest cost of maintaining her consists of the expense of guarding her from molestation.

Mussolini has a certain sense of humor and subtly appreciates the picture which is presented to the outside world as the son of a village blacksmith who was once a poor reporter with the seat out of his pants and who has no use for money now that he can print all he wants.

Mr. Wythe Williams, the American journalist, knew Mussolini as a reporter 15 years ago and met him again as dictator in the Duce's big office in the Venetian palace. He walked half a block from the door to Mussolini's desk as the Duce stood there putting on his stock scowl and arrived a little out of breath.

"That's a helluva long walk," said Mr. Williams. Mussolini grinned, dropped his pose and said, "Yes, it's a long way here from where we last met."

Roosevelt Gets Apology For Ad by Liquor Firm

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—H. I. Peffer, president of the Seagrams-Distillers Corporation, said today he had sent a letter of apology to President Roosevelt for publication of an advertisement containing a picture of a man some readers mistook for the Chief Executive.

None of the company officials, he said, had noticed the resemblance until letters and telephone calls were received after the advertisements appeared Tuesday in 100 daily newspapers.

"Japan Wants Arms Reduction"

Tokyo Naval Leaders At London Never Wavered.

By Frank H. Hedges.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Tokyo.

None in Tokyo at all conversant with the situation and familiar with the psychology of the Japanese navy office ever expected the five-power naval limitation conference in London to succeed. Japan was willing to have it succeed, even anxious for that outcome—but only on condition that it fulfilled all Japanese desires. Admiral Nagano and his fellow delegates left Tokyo for London by way of Soviet Russia with their minds already made up that they would not budge a single inch from their contention for a common upper limit of naval tonnage which would give full parity to Japan.

This is their story and they have unquestionably stuck to it. Of what use, they may well have reasoned in London, to discuss proposals by other powers until their own position was granted. Being determined not to yield their point, it is perhaps wise from their own standpoint to have sought to gain it before passing on to other proposals, which might have been used for bargaining purposes by the powers making them.

Those of us who, as press correspondents stationed in Tokyo, have gone to the press conferences at the foreign office here day after day throughout the conference have become exasperated at times. If Japan wants to set forth a particular program for action in London and stick to it through thick and thin, then that is Japan's privilege, of course. One may agree or disagree with the program, but Tokyo's right to uphold it can not be questioned.

• • • •

THE exasperation has arisen from the lack of logic displayed, whether consciously or unconsciously, both in Tokyo and London. The Japanese principle at the London Conference was a simple one: The fixation of a common maximum naval tonnage limit up to which Japan would have the right to build equally with any other power. No one can fail to perceive and understand this. But there has been a steady reiteration on the part of official spokesmen here that the other powers must agree to Japan's demand because "Japan is right and Japan wants reduction of armaments."

It is pointed out again and again that Japan wants reduction of armaments, provided Japan's armaments can be as great as Britain's and America's. The reply is always that just quoted, the provision being utterly ignored. Yet it is the proviso that assumed the most importance and that was the stumbling block in the way of agreement.

It was pointed out that the United States, too, wants reduction of armaments and proposed a 20 per cent all-round cut. This, the reply came, was unacceptable because "Japan is right and Japan wants reduction of armaments." Not once has it been officially conceded here that the American proposal is objectionable because, although it provides for reduction, it maintains the present ratio of 5-5-3. "Japan is right and Japan wants reduction of armaments."

ONE cannot help recalling certain of the Japanese Buddhist sects, notably the strong Jodo, or Pure Land, sect, which holds to faith by salvation. Such a teaching is a radical departure from original Buddhism, but it is a popular one in Japan. The Jodo sect maintains that salvation may be won by the constant repetition of "Nammu Admia Butsu," and its adherents go about murmuring this sacred phrase over and over again throughout their lives. They are, literally, talking their way into heaven, and it has seemed that the government here has been trying to talk its way into being accepted as the sole champion of world peace and disarmament. Unfortunately for this attempt, the facts are more convincing to the world, at large than is the repetition of any magic phrase.

For some time past there has been a realization on the part of many Japanese that the nation would benefit if all army officers were given a thorough course in economics, even in elementary economics. Economic affairs may be none of the army's business, but when non-economic minded army officers interfere with and try to direct the course of the economic development of Manchukuo, for instance, trouble is almost certain to arise. It has now been suggested that a course in logic be added for naval officers.

The Japanese delegation has received the unqualified support of the press and public at home. There was thorough accord throughout Japan that the inferior naval ratio established by the Washington conference must go to the end that Japan be accorded parity. Unofficial but insistent hints are given that, if this parity be granted on paper, Japan will not build up to it in fact. This is in all probability true, since there is no necessity, from a practical standpoint, for Japan to incur the tremendous cost of a navy of the size needed for the protection of the British empire. But one cannot blame the various delegations in London for being unwilling to act on these unofficial hints.

• • • •

THE prestige and power of the Japanese navy and the army received a severe blow at Washington and again at the first London naval limitation conference. Both services at once began fighting to regain their losses, and regained they certainly have been. A trail of casualties lies along this road back to power. Premier Hamaguchi died as the result of wounds inflicted by a would-be assassin. Another premier, a minister of finance and one of Japan's greatest business leaders have fallen at the hands of assassins. A score or more of men who were once leaders in Japan's public affairs have found their political careers clipped short. It is not for one moment intimated that the army and navy are directly responsible for these tragedies, but they are pointed to as part of the outcome in the struggle between civilian and military elements to direct the destiny of the empire.

The public support accorded Admiral Nagano, and the general policy of the army and navy both at home and abroad, is quite understandable. As long as any group of leaders, be they from the political or some other camp, gives the people what they want or what they think they want, that group will receive the unqualified support of the people. This is what the army and navy in Japan have been doing for nearly five years past. If they cease to do so, or if the public decides it wants something other than what it is receiving at present, then—but then only—will public support swerve from the army and navy.

Knowledge that public opinion at home was solidly behind them undoubtedly strengthened the determination of the delegation in London to adhere to its declared program. An even greater source of strength was the fact that Japan is willing to fight. Japan does not want to fight—far from it—but Japan is willing to do so, provided it cannot peacefully get its way. No other delegation in London is in a similar position. If it reached the point of actual warfare, there is a possibility that restraining elements might arise in Japan and step in to prevent it, but that is only a possibility, while the willingness to fight rather than to yield is a tangible fact.

• • • •

JAPAN can scarcely expect that the two Anglo-Saxon powers will sign a naval agreement based on absolute parity, but that is not necessary to obtain the major half of Japan's dual program at the conference. Since no new treaty is to be signed and the Washington agreement is allowed to lapse, the question of ratios is ended and every nation is entitled to parity on paper. The world will undoubtedly watch with intense interest whether Japan builds to parity in fact. It is most unlikely, for it is not necessary and it entails too great a financial burden to be indulged in as a luxury. Japan may, with the old treaties out of the way, come to some working agreement on arms limitation.

That is the most that can be expected, and this was as true the day before the Japanese delegation left Japanese soil as during any session of the conference. The Foreign Office spokesman recently asked the foreign correspondents here whether they had ever expected success at London. No answer was given, and neither did he commit himself, but certainly no one in this country, Japanese or Westerner, could reasonably have expected success.

Perhaps the best indication of this truth is that the Japanese Ambassador to Great Britain, Tsuneo Matsudaira, who was home on leave, did not return to London as a delegate, which would have been the normal course in Japanese diplomacy. He, and the Foreign Office as well, fully realize that he will be a more valuable Ambassador at the Court of St. James when he does return if he has not in the meantime officially participated in an abortive naval conference.

When Japan looks at the naval conference, it reaches the conclusion that the powers "are all out of step but Jim."

Denied Treaty Parity, Japan Has It Now In Fact.

Mr. Twitchell Confers an Award.

The Distinguished Candor Award for 1936 has been awarded by Elmer Twitchell, chairman of the award committee, to Mr. John Jacob Astor 3d, for his recent statement that he gave up a regular job because he found it took up too much of his time.

• • • •

"In this era of bunk, ballyhoo and baloney it is about time somebody told the truth," said Elmer today. "Mr. Astor put his finger on the whole trouble with work: it takes up too much time.

• • • •

"Work, if it could be done quickly, wouldn't bother us. The trouble is it ties us down. The more you think of the time required for your work the more appalling it becomes. Take a man who has an 8-hour-a-day job; if he ain't mighty careful he'll be putting in 5 hours at it!"

• • • •

Elmer paused a moment to consider his facts. "Now an old-timer with years of experience gets to be a judge of pace and he can really gauge things so that an 8-hour-day won't take more than 3 or 4 hours of his time. In every office you will find at least one man who, when he is right, can figure it out so his job won't take more than 2½ hours of his time.

• • • •

"I've seen a lot of fellers who didn't really devote more than an hour and a half at the outside to their work, but they were experts. In fact, I know a feller right now whose job calls for the 8-hour-day and if the company gets 15 minutes of his time it's lucky, but this man is a genius. We can't all be like him.

• • • •

"The point about Mr. Astor is that he's a green hand. He probably took his job too seriously. I imagine that he is so conscientious, like most young fellers today, that he just couldn't accept an 8-hour-a-day job and cut it down by more than 4 hours.

• • • •

"He probably went right ahead playing fair with the company and giving it half of the expected 8 hours out of sheer loyalty. A lot of beginners are that way. But after a while they get over that sense of devotion. With a little practice a man can fix any 8-hour job so that it won't take any of his time to speak of.

• • • •

"The trouble with Mr. Astor is that he didn't have the patience and perseverance. If he'd stuck at it he could have figured that job out so that his time would have been practically all his own."

• • • •

Bock Beer In Spring

By Karl Schriftgiesser

Cruelty to Journalists.

THERE are several matters with which the nine old but learned men of the Supreme Court might well interest themselves, but which probably will never come before them. But they ought to do something about the matter of bock beer.

Time was when bock beer was more than a bitter tonic. Time was when it was a symbol, which some of us even held as sacred. It was a part of the national life, and the little goat that gamboled its way through city streets, advance guard of the coming of spring, was even more to be relied upon than death, taxes, or the calendar.

But no more. Here it is the 7th of February, and the little goat is out in the cold, butting his head at the barroom door, demanding entrance. The Lord, I hope, will temper the wind against him, will sharpen his hooves, so he will not slide and stumble to destruction. For February is no time for the bock beer goat to be out on the loose.

• • • •

ALL over Washington these bitterly cold days they are offering bock beer for sale. If none else will rise in protest, I, as an old editorial writer, will do so. For what will there be for members of this ancient craft to write about, when the first birdy sings, and the first flower peeps through the snow? Thus to deprive these gentry of their inalienable right to wax poetic for half a column, and end with the final word, "Bock beer is here," is little short of cruelty.

For years, before the great drought, editorial writers used to feed that little goat tenderly through the winter months, waiting for the first lassitude of spring fever to wrack their bones. Then they would turn him loose in pastures of rich prose, after desultory research in the encyclopedia for the purpose of waxing learned over just what bock beer is anyway.

Never before the middle of March, seldom that early, did the molders of public opinion celebrate their rites of spring. But now the brewers' big horses have stamped right into town, dragging the sacrificial goat behind them, while there is still ice in the streets and ashes in the cellar and no signs that spring's not far behind.

• • • •

THIS forcing of the season is, I submit, something which might well be thrashed out in those leathery chambers where the learned justices track precedent to its lair. The justices, I am sure, would be willing to write a majority opinion in defense of the little goat. And I am sure none would aid in writing a word of dissent.

If railroads can have their taxes lowered, and farmers can be rescued from the city slickers who would have the little pigs plowed under, surely the great beer-drinking public may find redress in the last court of appeals from bock beer in February.

For what will there be to do in March and April? It is not the molder of the public opinion alone who suffers from this affront to historical precedent, but every decent, beer-drinking man or woman. There should be warm sun in the sky and soft mud in the streets, and the stirring odors of an awakening world in the air, when bock beer comes in. Not chill winds and ice, and the stench of soft coal, such as now assails the nostrils and mixes poorly with the tonic fumes of bock beer.

Before prohibition people waited patiently in beer-drinking centers of the East, such as Baltimore or Boston, for the little goat to appear. He was like a zodiacal sign, as regular as the sun in his course. Everyone thought bock beer was a green beer made out of sweetly bitter herbs, and served new and fresh to those whose blood was thinned by the long winter nights.

Judiciary Body Reverses Stand on Charges Against Ritter.

By the Associated Press.

Impeachment of Federal Judge Halsted L. Ritter, of the Southern Florida District was recommended yesterday by the House Judiciary Committee.

Acting on charges of "favoritism, oppression and judicial misconduct," voiced on the House floor by Representative Green (Democrat), Florida, the committee reversed a previous decision not to recommend impeachment proceedings.

The House next will decide whether Ritter shall be brought before the Senate for trial.

In an impeachment petition submitted to the House January 14, Green accused Ritter of allowing attorney fees "to A. L. Rankin, his former law partner, in the sum of $75,000," and accepting "in cash from A. L. Rankin the sum of $2,500" on one occasion, and on another, $2,000.

Ritter, the petition set forth, on numerous occasions "did willfully, unlawfully and knowingly visit the Whitehall receivership porperty, a hotel, and with members of his family, enjoy its meals, beds, pressing service and the general and full hospitality without pay."

Should the House vote impeachment articles, the Senate would be called upon for the first time since 1933 to sit as a jury in the trial of a Federal official. The last Senate trial resulted in the acquittal of Harold Louderback, Federal Judge of California.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 6 (AP).—Federal Judge Halstead L. Ritter, informed here of the House Judiciary Committee's adverse resolution, said only that "certainly I will defend myself."

Confederate Reunion.

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 6 (AP).—Gen. Harry Rene Lee, commander in chief of the United Confederate Veterans, said today that the forty-sixth annual reunion would be held at Shreveport June 10-13, inclusive. He estimated that about 800 veterans would attend.

Alaska Spying Laid to Japan In Investigation

'Fishing' Craft Spotting Air Bases, Sounding Coast, House Body Told.

By the Associated Press.

Charges of extensive Japanese espionage in Alaska, conducted from vessels ostensibly operated as fishing craft, were made yesterday at the Capitol.

Representative Sirovich (Democrat), of New York, asserted the Japanese actually were engaged in "spotting possible airplane fields and submarine bases." Delegate Dimond (Democrat), of Alaska, declared the Asiatic power had amassed detailed information of the Territory for use in the event of war. Both spoke before the House Merchant Marine Committee.

"These Japanese vessels operating ostensibly as fishing craft are taking soundings, exploring water depths, taking photographs of the shore line and spotting possible airplane fields and submarine bases," Sirovich charged.

Dimond, contending that "the Japanese know as much about the Alaskan coast line and the Aleutian Islands as we do and possibly more," said surveying parties from Japanese craft do not always stay outside the 3-mile limit.

"Several times residents have seen them inside the line and even on shore," he said.

Sirovich declared it was the purpose of Japan in the event of war "to grab Alaska and thus provide a food supply for the fish-eating Japanese people."

He deplored the "inadequate" defenses of the United States in Alaska and on the Aleutian Islands, and said the islands could readily be used as submarine and airplane bases for raids into the United States.

The discussion started before the Merchant Marine Committee during consideration of bills by Dimond and Representative Golden (Democrat), of California, authorizing Government construction of a fishing research boat for the Pacific Coast. Golden and Dimond urged construction of the research boat to aid in the discovery of new fishing banks, find out where fish go during the off seasons and provide information on currents and weather.

Miners Double Lewis' Salary Over Protests

$25,000 to Be Annual Pay; Membership Extended to Coke Field.

By the Associated Press.

Over the protest of a large block of delegates, the United Mine Workers' convention yesterday increased the salary of John L. Lewis from $12,000 to $25,000 a year.

The raise makes the miners' president one of the highest-paid labor leaders in the country. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, is paid $12,000 and expenses.

The miners also voted to extend their membership to "coal processing plants." Observers felt this move may have important repercussions in the fight between craft and industrial unionists, now threatening to split the American Federation of Labor, should the miners attempt to organize skilled craftsmen in by-product coke plants.

Lewis has been campaigning for the organization of labor by industries against repeated disapproval of the American Federation of Labor.

Patrick Fagan, western Pennsylvania district president, was acting chairman of the convention when the constitution committee, headed by Van A. Bittner, southern West Virginia president, proposed these salary increases in addition to Lewis:

Philip Murray, vice president, and Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer, from $9,000 to $18,000 each; Ellis Searles, editor of the Miners' Journal, from $4,000 to $7,000; executive board members, from $300 to $500 a month, and convention delegates from $10.50 to $12.50 a day.

A turbulent half hour followed, with a number of delegates making brief speeches in protest and those favoring the raises jeering and hooting. Some of the speakers favored smaller increases, while others told of hungry and barefoot miners in their districts.

When those against the increases took the floor, Fagan announced the amendment was adopted and immediately started his introduction of Representative Vinson (Democrat), of Kentucky, a guest speaker.

Several delegates who had opposed the increases sought recognition. After Vinson had finished and the convention turned to other proposed amendments, these same delegates were ruled "out of order" when they demanded a roll-call vote on the pay raise.

When there was a considerable "no" vote on adoption of the constitution committee's report as a whole, Lewis, then presiding, said: "I don't know what some of the delegates think they are doing by acting that way. They surely are not representing their locals."

He called the committee report adopted, and there was no further protest.

Radio workers appealed to the convention by radiogram yesterday for help in their fight for an A. F. of L. industrial union charter. The federation executive council several weeks ago ordered them to consolidate with the electricians' union, a craft organization.

Pianist Plays Tonight.

Evelyn Carpenter, a talented young pianist of Washington, will give a recital tonight at 8:15 in the Arts Club. Her program is announced as follows: Sonata in G major, Op. 31 (Beethoven), Gavotte from Violoncello Suite No. 6 (Bach), Prelude from Violin Sonata No. 6 (Bach), Nachtstuck (Schumann), Romance, Op. 24 (Sibelius), Spinning Song (Mendelssohn), Preludo, Op. 28, No. 15; Nocturne, Op. 9, No. 2; Waltz, Op. 18 (Chopin).

Senate Gets AAA Substitute

Hatch, of New Mexico (Democrats), and George W. Norris (Republican), Nebraska.

Norris asserted his belief that the bill is constitutional, but doubted if it met the legal requirements of the Supreme Court.

Asserting he disagreed with the court, Wagner said the new bill appeared just as offensive to the court as the AAA. He suggested provision be made for a normal production period as a basis for Federal subsidies.

Hastings wanted to know if the new bill did not cross purposes with the AAA, by ultimately aiming to increase farm production.

Conform to Yardstick.

It was pointed out that there are no "measurements" or "standards" in the bill, imposing any restriction on the the Secretary to make payments conform to a given yardstick. One group of farmers could well receive one sum and another group a larger amount, for equal curtailments of acreage, it was said.

Under cross-examination by Vandenberg, Smith admitted that Secretary Wallace could "establish a billions dollars worth of regulation, or a quarter of a billion," but said he assumed the amount appropriated would be sufficiently limited to provide "a common-sense administration of the proposed law."

Interposing again, Vandenberg said, "The Senator will agree with me that it would not be appropriate for us to leave to the Secretary of Agriculture whether one or two or five millions of dollars is to be taken out of the Treasury."

"Oh, no; I think not," Smith replied.

Meanwhile the House marked time on its own farm bill, which may not come up for more than a week. In a minority report on this measure, Representative Gerald J. Boileau (Progressive), of Wisconsin, said the bill was "broad enough to give the Secretary of Agriculture such power as might be needed to control production."

As farm debate raged on both sides of the Capitol, the Senate approved and sent to the House a conference report on the $387,000,000 deficiency appropriation bill, carrying $296,000,000 to pay formers who had, before January 6, at least partially complied with 1935 AAA crop-control contracts.

20 District Prisoners Seek Paroles Today

Applications of 20 District prisoners to be paroled will be considered at a hearing before the Parole Board at the District Reformatory at Lorton, Va., today.

British Deny Selling Ethiopians Dum-Dums

Geneva, Feb. 6 (AP).—Great Britain denied today, in a communication to the League of Nations, Italian charges that British firms had supplied dum-dum bullets to Ethiopians for military purposes.

The Italian protest arose from charges at Fascist headquarters on the southern front at Dolo that several Dubat (native) warriors had been brought to a field hospital with "brutal wounds from which dum-dum bullets were extracted."

Don Marquis, Author, Stricken by Paralysis

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—Don Marquis, columnist and playright, suffered a cerebral hemorrhage Sunday, resulting in paralysis of his right side, it was learned tonight. His condition was said to be serious. Marquis is 57 years old.

Volga Boatman Plans to Offer Bridge Lessons

By Chanticleer.

Now you can get bridge instruction at Matt Windsor's Club Volga Boatman. William Cheeks, local authority, is on hand every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday afternoon in the Boatman's cocktail lounge. And at no charge to the patrons. He'll help you if you wish—or you can play with a party of friends without his assistance, just as you wish . . . The Samovar's daph player has departed for Florida to join a large Persian orchestra at Joe Zelli's in West Palm Beach. Artem played a tamborine-like drum with the three-piece Persian orchestra at the Samovar. And he got several different tones out of it, which intrigued me no end. Don't forget the "Quarter Hour" between 4:30 and 5:30 at the Samovar when all bar concoctions are on the board at 25 cents . . . Uxtry, uxtry, from Ol' Massa Pete Macias' Club Heigh Ho! Every Sunday night, beginning this week, there's going to be a little music in the Heigh Ho's taproom in the Onyx Club style—a trio composed of Jack Minovich, violinist; Phil Fine, pianist, and Sid Cowan or Marty Rubin, bass. From 11 to 2. And plenty of impromptu entertainment is expected as a result . . . Although the notice is not entirely official, I suspect that Peter Borras' next attraction at the Madrillon will be the Ojedas, exotic Mexican team direct from Radio City's Music Hall. Incidentally, if you want a real Spanish meal, Host Borras would, perhaps, duplicate the menu of Principios, Puchero soup and Pollo Asada with Spanish rice, prepared a day or two ago for the Spanish guitarist, Andres Segovia . . . Karavaeff, the dancing emmcee at the Russian Troika, is one of the few first-class hoofers who can talk intelligently. Sometimes he combines his rapid-fire emceeing with his dancing and then, my friends, you have a three-ring Russian circus on your hands. They do say that it was Karavaeff who originated the whirling tap step on which Eleanor Powell has built much of her fame . . . The last word in smart dancing is coming (next Monday) to the Shoreham ballroom. They're the Royces—Seymour and Eleanor—direct from Manhattan's Biltmore, where they have been consistently drawing flowery phrases from the critics. They're English, have been in this country only a few months. Tonight is Movie Night again, with a showing of last week's pictures . . . The Three Olympics are all right. They're the skating experts now gracing the floor of the Lotus. If they suffer from anything, it's a failure to take advantage of their entertainment worth. They literally take your breath away and then leave you thinking of the modest way in which it's all done.

Flying Laboratory Bought by Hughes

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 6 (U.P.).—Howard Hughes, millionaire aviation enthusiast and movie producer, has purchased the Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., "flying laboratory," it was learned today.

Negotiations and delivery of the plane were conducted in secrecy at Hughes' request. The giant, twin-motored skyliner was equipped with additional gas tanks for Hughes, giving it a cruising radius of almost 5,000 miles.

Hughes accepted the plane yesterday in New York and flew it to Los Angeles. He made no effort to set a record because of head winds. Hughes is the present holder of the West-East transcontinental speed record as well as holder of the world's record for land plane speed.

The flying laboratory, prototype of T. W. A.'s transport planes, was used by the corporation for experimental work, chiefly in the substratosphere.

Troops and Civilians Battle in Syrian City

Beirut, Syria, Feb. 6 (AP).—Seventeen soldiers, 12 policemen, and an undetermined number of civilians were injured today in a Nationalist riot at Hama.

A crowd stoned public buildings there after a mass meeting in the mosque. Trops were called out to restore order.

In Damascus, bazaars were closed while Syrian leaders promised to ask the students to stop rioting if the government will pardon the 217 persons convicted of fomenting disorders and participating in them.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Moon Over Miami.

Miami, Feb. 6.—In the midst of all the lush extravagance which is associated with this city, there are three morals which might be pointed out . . . At the Hialeah Race Track, where the ponies run to the metallic accompaniment of the pari-mutuel machines, there are two well known figures standing behind the $2 windows . . . One is Rube Marquard, once one of the great pitchers of the New York Giants . . . The wry-necked Marquard deals out $2 tickets now to speculative gents who believe they can beat the bangtails . . . At an adjoining window, also selling these $2 pasteboards, is George Collins, once secretary to James J. Walker, when Jimmy was mayor of New York . . . Just how much they get for a day's work, I don't know, but it doesn't compare to the wages they drew in their affluence . . . The Beach and Tennis Club supplies the third telling moral . . . This spot once was the mansion of Carl Fischer, who came from Indianapolis to develop Miami Beach, made a great fortune and then lost it when the depression trapped him at Montauk . . . The moral, in each of the three instances, is alike . . . It is—when you're in the chips save your money.

Because the former Barbara Hutton is growing steadily weaker . . . Continental specialists will perform a Caesarian operation on February 21!

Georgie Jessel, appearing here at a local hot spot, has been commuting to Palm Beach nightly, but the strain of the trip late at night was considerable . . . Jessel would have continued it, however had it not been for a conversation last night with his chauffeur . . . "I felt awfully drowsy last night on the way to Palm Beach," Jessel remarked . . . "Yeah, me too," said the chauffeur . . . "I fell asleep for about five minutes near Fort Lauderdale" . . . Jessel now sleeps in Miami.

Arriving here, your reporter was met at the Miami-Biltmore by Postmaster General James A. Farley, Ambrose O'Connell and Sid Solomon, who were alighting from a limousine at the moment . . . It was a trifle difficult to identify the three of them, because of the handsome and impressive tans which decorated their ordinarily pale countenances . . . Jim Farley came down here to get himself in condition for the strenuous campaign which lies ahead of the Roosevelt forces, and he has succeeded . . . I don't think the Postmaster General ever has enjoyed himself so hugely on a vacation . . . His 10-year-old daughter, Ann, and his 13-year-old daughter, Betty, are the reasons, because it is one of the rare occasions on which he has had them all to himself for any length of time.

Notes: With Sophie Tucker opening here Friday, H. Richman opening Saturday and the Ritz Brothers' premiere set for Tuesday, the town is hotter than the Stem . . . George Marshall, Eddie Reeves, Woolworth Donahue, Jerry Brady, Frank Keeney were at the races yesterday . . . Renee Torres seems to be the favored companion of Young Donahue . . . Buddy Rogers, Nancy Carroll and Ethel Merman are living at this hotel, commuting to the beach in the autogiro which serves as a cloud-taxi for the guests of Henry L. Doherty . . . Mary Kirk Brown is here, and gorgeous as usual . . . Maj. Namm, very tanned, chatting with Postmaster General Farley . . . Georgia Ellis, here for four weeks, if she doesn't pick the wrong horses at Hialeah . . . Best-liked in this man's town, Bill Dwyer.

At the moment, your reporter is waiting at the threshold for a detachment of swells from Palm Beach . . . Who are making the trip here for the huge dinner to Jim Farley . . . Mr. and Mrs. Jim Moffett are bringing over about 70 of the Palm Beachers, and I understand that there will be close to 850 people assembled when we sit down to the first course . . . Joseph E. Widener, approached by some of the dinner committee, gave an honest answer . . . "I'd like to take a table," said the master of Hialeah, "but I'm not for the Administration" . . . Luckily, however, the enrolled Democrats do not draw the political line on Widener's Hialeah Race Track . . . I understand that the pari-mutuel machines, which swallow up your money, can not distinguish between an Old Dealer and a New Dealer, or an old dollar and a new dollar.

Night club business has not yet struck its stride here . . . Although the owners of the Miami places have spared no expense in enticing patronage . . . Moore and Revel headline the big show at the Palm Island Casino show, Andrea Marsh, Bob Grant's band, Milton Berle, Cardini, Medranna and Donna, and Buddy Rogers' band are a few of the high-tariff ttractions working here.

I'm writing this in the Western Union office at the Miami-Biltmore, and directly to the rear of me is an operator tapping his telegrapher's "bug" directly into our office in New York . . . Superintendent Phillips has arranged a direct circuit to cover the 1,483 miles, and they tell me that Operator Nolan is one of the crack telegraphers of the South . . . He's just asked me for another page, so good-by now.

On the Air Today

ONCE in a very long while I have a mellow glow of satisfaction when one of my pet (and I might as well add personal, I suppose) complaints on the structure of the radio picture is vindicated. And such is the case today.

Word comes that Sigmund Romberg's Tuesday night programs in the future will be "straight musical" from now on. With competent singers and musicians without any "artificially created atmosphere."

Romberg announces: "Letters from listeners have dictated this change in our program attitude. We have found that they are a little tired of shows which try to create, through tricks in the studio, the idea that the music is coming from a 'club,' a 'barn,' a 'hotel' or some other 'scene' when everybody knows we're in a broadcasting studio. All these effects have a tendency to detract from the music when the effects themselves are not musical.

"From now on we intend to play the music 'straight' with a simple announcement of the name and the number, and, if it is a vocal selection, the name of the singer. Under this setup we will present the music and the musicians on their own merits without any dressing up."

That draws three loud, long cheers from this point of observation. I am, unbeknown to Mr. Romberg, one of those who has wearied of the devices and strained results obtained in "setting" air shows in "theaters, night clubs" and perhaps—"barns."

For some time I have been terribly bored with the forced excitement or equally forced suppressed eagerness in the announcer's voice; "ahhh, what is that? Yes, the curtain rises, the brilliant shaft of the spotlight turns to the wings, and yes, yes, out steps the glorious Minnie Zilch, to sing (about which time a fake audience applauds vigorously, doubtless on a record) John Q. Turnip's 'Song to a Red Beet.'"

This goes on for half an hour. There is just as much illusion of being in a theater or a night club as though the artists were performing in divers' helmets at the bottom of the sea.

And this would not be so bad if there were not a constant flow of them. One or two a week would be fine—if, they were done extraordinarily well.

This dissertation will cause raising of production men's eyebrows and a gentle wagging of the heads in the core of the studio apple. They will say "but all programs cannot be of one pattern. They must follow a variety of accepted and successful patterns. This is only one."

And I will still say that Mr. Romberg hits the nail on the head when he says this particular one is artificial.

* * * *

And speaking of artificiality, the Tito Guizars are in Washington for several weeks, as you know by this time. Artificial is exactly what the Guizars are not. The Guizars, Tito and his lovely wife, Carmen, are what we call "folks" where I come from. Tito, of the familiar air "yippee," is a handsome, gracious, unspoiled fellow—equaled in handsomeness, graciousness and a vivacious naturalness by his beautiful wife. I could not help but feel the other afternoon at their get-together for some friends and newspapermen that Mrs. Guizar's casual story of how she and Tito met in New York, while she was a dancer and he, so new to this country that he could not speak a word of English, hardly did justice to the family. Some exceedingly wise little Dan Cupid followed them all the way from their native Mexico and had the sticktoitiveness to bring them together in a city of 6,000,000 persons. And that seems to have been exactly as it should have been.

Fund Given Wife Sought by Servant

The housekeeper of a former Washington policeman yesterday asked the United States Supreme Court to decide whether she or the officer's widow is entitled to a $1,500 death benefit from the Police Relief Association.

Two District courts have ruled in favor of Mrs. Maggie MacDermott, the widow of Hugh MacDermott, who died November 8, 1933. His housekeeper, Mrs. Katherine R. Simpkins, asserts that she is entitled to the money because of a memorandum, signed by the policeman before his death, which named her as the beneficiary.

The relief association had awarded the money to the widow under District Insurance laws. Mrs. Simpkins claimed that the association was exempt from these laws and a policeman could designate any one as his beneficiary.

'Civil' Status Sought For Navy Workers

A bill to place 210 Navy Yard employes in the civil service was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, as Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, reported progress in his efforts to work out a compromise on the two Government leave bills.

Randolph's measure is intended to remedy a situation which has arisen from the indefinite employment of temporary employes. It was referred to the House Civil Service Committee.

Senator McKellar, after a conference with Luther Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, said that he did not expect his amendments would be ready for Senate action before next week.

Archbishop of Puebla Expelled by Mexicans

Mexico City, Feb. 6 (AP).—Mgr. Pedro Vera Zuria, Archbishop of Puebla, was expelled from his home 10 days ago by inspectors of the federal treasury department, it was disclosed today.

The officials confiscated the archbishop's house and seized his files and records.

The Catholic Episcopate today petitioned President Lazaro Cardenas to supply constitutional guarantees of safety to the archbishop.

G. U. Physicians Given Dinner

University Hospital Staff and Wives Honored by Sisters of St. Francis.

Georgetown University Hospital took on a festive air last night as the entire staff of physicians and surgeons attended a dinner given in their honor by the Sisters of St. Francis, who conduct the hospital for the university. There were about 240 guests, including the wives of most of the members of the staff.

The guests of honor were the Rev. Dr. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of Georgetown University; the Rev. David V. McCauley, S. J., regent and dean of the School of Medicine, and Dr. George Tully Vaughn, professor emeritus of surgery.

Sister Rodriguez, superintendent, made the arrangements for the dinner. Blue and gray decorations, the colors of the university, mingled with flowers and greens to brighten the two large parlors which were converted into a dining hall. The dinner was the first given by the hospital to members of its staff since the earliest years of its existence.

Among the heads of departments and their wives present were Dr. and Mrs. Wallace M. Yater, Dr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Mundell, Dr. and Mrs. Fred O. Coe, Dr. and Mrs. Eugene R. Whitmore, Dr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Lowe and Dr. and Mrs. Frank E. Duehring.

Culbertson on Bridge

After a particularly hectic session of the recent national tournament conducted by the United States Bridge Association, a group of experts gathered at a restaurant table, ostensibly for calorie replenishment, actually, I think, for an intensive post mortem. The 30-odd hands just played were dissected to the accompaniment of wailing from some and gloating from others, and then the talk turned to general bridge matters. (Bridge experts, like actors, have a horizon limited sharply to their one activity.) Some one posed the question: "What particular fault is most costly to a weak player?" These were the answers of the six experts present:

1. Timidity in the first rounds of bidding, frantic "stretching" in the later rounds.
2. Ruinous opening leads.
3. The inability, when holding a weak hand, to visualize partner's hand, from his bidding, as almost strong enough to carry on alone.
4. Too much finessing.
5. Not knowing when to make penalty doubles.

But the sixth expert looked around superciliously and sneered. "I guess you fellows have completely overlooked rescue bids!"

A Case in Point.

North, dealer.

NORTH
♥ Q 10 7
♦ K 10 6 5 3
♣ A

WEST
♠ 8 7 5
♥ J 8 5 4 3 2
♦ A 7
♣ Q 5

♠ K J 9
♦ Q J 9
♣ J 10 9 8 4 3

SOUTH
♠ Q 4 2
♥ A K 6
♦ 8 4 3
♣ K 7 6 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 diamond	2 clubs	Double	2 hearts
Double (final bid).

It is true that East's two club overcall was questionable, but his six card suit, although jack high, was fairly solid and he was not afraid of a large penalty. As a matter of fact, two clubs could not have been defeated more than one trick.

West was an habitual "rescuer," which South well knew when he made his close double of two clubs. North knew it, too, hence his penalty double of the hearts on a hand that really warranted a pass at this point.

The defense was excellent. North opened the ace of clubs and shifted to the ace and another spade. Dummy's king won and a second round of clubs was played, South winning the king. A diamond from South went to West's ace and the diamond was returned. North's king winning. A spade put South in the lead and he followed with a low club, North overtrumping the declarer. A diamond lead was trumped by the declarer, who had nothing but trumps left. He led a low heart to the nine; South won with the king. The fourth round of clubs gave North another overruff and South's ace of trumps accounted for the defenders' ninth trick and 700 point reward.

Third State Reception Is Held at White House

President and Mrs. Roosevelt Entertain Officials of Treasury, Postoffice and Other Departments.

By Francesca McKenney.

Last evening the third state reception was given by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt in the White House in honor of the officials of the Treasury, Postoffice, Interior, Agriculture, Commerce and Labor Departments, and the Federal agencies.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained at a small dinner last evening preceding the reception, when among the guests were Mrs. Mary Breckinridge, head of the Frontier Nursing Service and who is spending several days in the Capital; and Miss Selma Wolf, of Boston, who was a guest at the White House of Mr. Franklin Roosevelt, jr., who left the Capital after the reception to return to her home.

Shortly after 9 o'clock the doors of the state dining room were swung open and the Marine Band struck up "Hail to the Chief," as the corps of military and naval aids made their appearance in their full dress uniforms and gold braid, followed by the President, who was escorted by Capt. Wilson Brown and Mrs. Roosevelt escorted by her son, Mr. Franklin Roosevelt, jr., and Col. Edwin Watson, to the blue room to receive the 1,300 guests who had assembled in the East room. Mrs. Roosevelt wore a gown of Eleanor blue chiffon, with a silver lame sash, the ends of which formed a train.

The members of the Cabinet and their wives followed the President and the First Lady as far as the red room where they took up their position. The Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull, headed the members of the Cabinet, the latter wearing a gown of salmon-colored satin, made on long lines with a train, then came the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry A. Morgenthau, jr., the latter wearing a gown of black velvet with a bertha collar of rare old lace. The Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings were absent from the line due to illness, as was the Postmaster General and Mrs. James A. Farley. Mr. Farley is spending a brief vacation in Miami Beach, Fla., and Mrs. Farley is in her home in New York.

Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, was escorted to the red room by Capt. Reybold, in place of the Secretary who seldom attends the receptions, and who is at present recuperating from a broken rib received yesterday in a fall in his home on R street. Mrs. Swanson wore a gown of silver and black lame made on long lines within a train and a sash of red taffeta, and her accessories were black. The Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Harold L. Ickes, was present last evening for the first time this season, since the death of Mrs. Ickes in an automobile accident in New Mexico. Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, was escorted by Lieut. Comdr. Ostrander, in the absence of the Secretary of Agriculture, who is out of town for several days. Mrs. Wallace wore a handsome gown of cherry red bergera velvet made on long lines with a cowl neckline. The Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Daniel C. Roper was not in the line as he is on a vacation in Florida. However, Mrs. Roper was there and was escorted by Lieut. Seaman. Mrs. Roper wore a gown of gold and white lame with a corsage of gold flowers at the neckline. The Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins, who was escorted to the red room by Capt. Horace Smith, wore a gown of black taffeta embroidered in gold.

The guests, after passing through the receiving line and the red room, entered the State dining room, to partake of the refreshments on the long buffet which was decorated with large silver bowls of pale pink carnations.

Among those to be greeted by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt were the Assitant Secretary of Labor and Mrs. Edward F. McGrady, the Director of the Bureau of Standards and Mrs. Lyman J. Briggs. The latter wore a gown of black crepe made on simple lines with a train and trimmed with diamente; the Chairman of the Social Securities Board, Gov. John G. Winant and Mrs. Winant; Miss Katharine F. Lenroot, head of the Children's Bureau, who wore a gown of gray-blue satin, and Mrs. South Trimble, wife of the Solicitor of the Department of Commerce, who attended with a group of friends in the absence of Mr. Trimble, who is spending some time in Florida.

The retiring Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., were seen saying good-by to their many new-found friends, and Mrs. Robert, better known to her friends as Evie, was heard to remark that she would return to Washington often and for long visits, for Washington had always been her home and always would be. Mrs. Robert looked charming last evening in a robe de style gown of white and silver lame with an off-the-shoulder neckline and in her hair she wore a bandeau of diamonds and pearls. The retiring Undersecretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Thomas Jefferson Coolidge were also bidding farewell to many of their friends, for they are leaving the Capital on February 15, when they will go to California, where they will spend some time. Mrs. Cooldige wore a robe de style gown of black taffeta, with large black velvet dots, made with a square neckline formed by narrow black shoulder straps.

Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and Mrs. Jesse Jones were there, the latter wearing a gown of white crepe with a corsage of deep purple orchids. Mrs. George Haas, cousin of Mrs. Morgenthau, who is spending several days in the Capital as the guest of the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Morgenthau, wore a gown of gold crepe with a deep cowl decolletage trimmed with mink. The Assistant Treasurer, Mrs. Marion Banister, wore a gown of black crepe trimmed with diamente at the neckline. Miss Selma Wolf, of Boston, wore a gown of fuchsia chiffon with a pleated skirt.

Mrs. Francis Wilkinson Bunker was present, wearing a gown of white net with a ruching of the same material around the neck and the edge of the skirt. Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor were there, the latter wearing a gown of brown and gold brocade embroidered with tiny small pink flowers. The First Assistant Postmaster General and Mrs. William W. Howes were accompanied by their daughter, Miss Mary Senate Howes. Mrs. Howes wore a gown of black velvet and Miss Howes wore a gown of pleated ivory chiffon.

Also there were Mr. and Mrs. John L. Keddy, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Pierson, Mr. Thomas Eliot, grandson of the late Mr. Charles Eliot, former president of Harvard University; Miss Jane Hoey, who wore a gown of black chiffon, and Dr. Louise Stanley, chief of the Bureau of Home Economics, wore a gown of dark blue crepe.

Mrs. Harry Baxter and her sister, Miss Betsy Dern, daughters of the Secretary of War and Mrs. Dern, were there, holding a court of their own with their many friends. Mrs. Baxter wore for the occasion a handsome pleated fuschia chiffon frock with a wide gold belt marking the waistline, while Miss Dern wore a gown of light blue pleated Dutch lace trimmed with silver lame at the neckline.

Mrs. Mitchell in Lace.

The President of the Civil Service Commission and Mrs. Harry B. Mitchell, were there, the latter wearing a gown of white lace embroidered with silver threads; Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin, civil service commissioner; the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Miss Josephine Roche; Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, the latter had on a gown of green velvet made on simple lines with a short train, and a corsage of gardenias; the Comptroller of the Currency, Mr. J. F. T. O'Connor; the Director of the Mint, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, who wore a gown of changeable taffeta with flounces on the skirt; the acting Director of the Bureau of the Budget and Mrs. Daniel W. Bell, who were accompanied by their daughter, Miss Mary Kathleen Bell.

Others seen chatting with their many friends as they wandered from room to room were the General Counsel of the Treasury and Mrs. Herman Oliphant, the Administrative Assistant and Budget Officer of the Department of the Interior, Mr. Ebert K. Burlew, and Mrs. Burlew, the latter wearing a gown of black velvet made on long lines; the Director of Investigations of the Department of Interior, Mr. Louis R. Glavis, and Mrs. Glavis; the Director of the Geological Survey, Mr. W. C. Mendenhall, and Mrs. Mendenhall, the latter wearing a gown of Amethyst velvet with accessories to match, and the Director of the Bureau of Mines, Mr. John W. Finch, and Mrs. Finch, the latter wearing a gown of black velvet.

Mrs. Van Hagan To Give Review

Book Talk Today Is Second of Series to Be Given at the Shoreham.

Mrs. Lydia Van Hagan will present the second of the series of ten book reviews, "World Events as Reflected in Current Literature," at 11:30 a. m. today in the west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel.

"Fascism and National Socialism," by Michael T. Florinsky, will be reviewed.

The lecture will be concluded with brief reviews of several of the outstanding recent novels. Among them will be "The Sound Wagon," by T. S. Stribling; "If I Have Four Apples," by Josephine Lawrence, and "The Jew of Rome," by Lion Feuchtwanger.

Mrs. Gardner Rogers will entertain a small party at luncheon at the Shoreham following the lecture.

Among the patronesses for the series of lectures are Mrs. William Howard Taft, Mrs. Hamilton Fish, Mrs. John Jay O'Connor, Mrs. George Hewitt Myers, Mrs. Huston Thompson, Mrs. Edward T. Mrs. Breckinridge Gives Talk On Volunteer Nursing Service

Hundred Members of Capital Society Gather at Textile Museum of Mrs. George Hewitt Myer to Hear of Pioneers' Work.

By Dudley Harmon.

More than a hundred members of Capital society gathered yesterday afternoon in Mrs. George Hewitt Myer's Textile Museum to hear Mrs. Mary Breckinridge speak of her work as head of the Volunteer Nursing Service. This organization, founded by Mrs. Breckinridge in 1925, provides thousands of Kentucky mountaineers with medical service which they would not be able to obtain otherwise.

Mrs. Roosevelt introduced Mrs. Breckinridge, who was a guest at dinner at the White House last evening. The First Lady wore a gown of black crepe with white revers, white gloves and a broad-brimmed black hat.

Mrs. Breckinridge spoke wisely and wittily of her experiences among the mountaineers. Under her direction, professional nurses and volunteer aids, the latter chosen from debutante ranks, rode on horseback over steep trails to the log cabins of the poor and ill. She joked about the fact that so much publicity was recently given the incident of an invalid being carried several blocks through snow on a stretcher when a blizzard caused a traffic tie-up in Fishkill, N. Y.

"Why, that's nothing," she said. "We carry people on stretchers for miles through blizzards in Kentucky."

Mrs. Breckinridge illustrated her talk with colored lantern slides showing the life among the Kentucky natives. There was loud applause from the audience when a picture of Miss Marian Shouse was thrown on the screen. Miss Shouse, the daughter of Mrs. Lawrence Groner, served as a volunteer with the organization.

After the lecture many among the audience went up and greeted Mrs. Breckinridge enthusiastically. She is well known in Washington, as she comes here often to talk of her work. On this trip she is dividing her time between staying with Mrs. Lawrence Groner, chairman of the Washington branch of the Frontier Nursing Service, and Mrs. Jeter Horton, her cousin.

Among those who attended the lecture yesterday were Admiral and Mrs. Cary Grayson, Mrs. Alexander Powell, Miss Virginia Hunt, Miss Lelia Peachey, Mrs. George Hewitt Myers, Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. Warren Austin, Mrs. Henry Wilder Keyes, Mrs. Schuyler Bland, Mrs. Richard Wigglesworth, Mrs. Thomas Bradley, Mrs. Joshua Evans, Mrs. Frank Baldwin, Mrs. Wilson Compton and Mrs. Smith Bowman, in town for the day from her home in Fairfax.

Several members of the younger set were present to hear of the work of the youthful volunteers with the Frontier Nursing Service. Among them were Miss Anne Carter Greene, president of the Junior League; Miss Rosalind Wright and Miss Caroline Thompson.

Tea Dance Is Honor To Miss Elinor Ryan

Mr. William Keane Ryan Is Host Here for Cousin, Spending the Season in Washington; Many Notables Are Among Guests.

Mr. William Keane Ryan was host yesterday at a tea dance in honor of his cousin, Miss Elinor Morse Ryan, of New York, who is spending the season in Washington. The dance was held in the Italian Garden of the Mayflower Hotel, which was decorated with pink roses and with garlands of smilax festooning the walls. Large hanging baskets of pink roses and pink snapdragons hung from the walls and the columns which divide the dance floor from the surrounding terrace. There buffets were placed with sandwiches and cakes, while from others cocktails, whisky and soda and sherry were served.

Mr. Ryan and Miss Ryan received their guests at the entrance of the garden and the guest of honor wore for the occasion a gown of smoke gray net trimmed with bands of emerald green velvet.

Among those at the dance were Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Perry Johnson, the latter wearing a smart suit of oxford gray, and a black hat; Rear Admiral and Mrs. Alfred Johnson, the latter wearing an ensemble of black with a small hat to match; the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Pater; the Minister of Portugal and Mme. Bianchi. The last-named wore black with a black fur coat.

Mlle. Skidelsky Present.

They were accompanied by Mme. Bianchi's daughter, Mlle. Sibilla Skidelsky, who also wore black with a black velvet hat. Also present were Counselor of the Hungarian Legation, Mr. Anthony de Balasy, and the Secretary of the Hungarian Legation, Baron Paul Schell; the Attache of the Belgian Embassy and Mme. Walravens, the latter wearing a costume of pale gray trimmed with black and a small black hat and black accessories.

Also there was the Ambassador of Cuba, Senor Dr. Guillermo Patterson y de Jauregui; the Secretary of the Netherland Legation, H. M. van der Wyck; the Counselor of the Cuban Embassy, Senor Dr. Jose T. Baron; Mrs. William T. Mann, wearing a frock of black crepe trimmed with terra-cotta, and a small black hat; Mrs. Chester A. Snow, jr., who wore all black for the occasion; Mrs. McKenney Mallan, who wore a smart frock of black crepe trimmed with a white collar and a white flower, a black hat and accessories completing her costume.

Mrs. Gest Attend.

Mrs. Sydney Gest wore an afternoon gown of pale gray trimmed with black and a black hat. The retiring Counselor of the Swedish Legation and Baroness Beck-Friis were accompanied by their daughter, Mlle. Christina Beck-Friis.

Also present were Mr. George R Galbraith, Mr. William Mitchell, Mr. Waverly Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Clark, the latetr looking very chic in a black afternoon gown with a tiny hat to match.

Also there were Mrs. Russell Bennett and her daughter, Miss Florence Harris, both gowned in black with small hats to match their costumes; the Attache of the Legation of Switzerland and Mme. Schlatter, the later wearing unrelieved black; Miss Diana Rowland, Lieut. and Mrs. Chester C. Wood, Mr. Edward Van Devanter, Count Leonie Fumasoni-Biondi, Mr. and Mrs. Royce Powell, the latter wearing a velvet suit of deep wine color with a blue fox cape and a small velvet hat of wine color; Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, who wore a dark brown suit with hat and accessories to match, and Mrs. Meldin Tucker.

WAS IT MURDER?

By JAMES HILTON

Author of "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" and "Lost Horizon."

Colin Revell, young writer, temporary secretary to Robert Roseveare, headmaster at Oakington School, is interested in the mysterious deaths of the Marshall brothers, students, and later of Lambourne, one of the masters. Revell and Guthrie, Scotland Yard detective, suspect Ellington, cousin of the boys and heir to their fortune, of their murder until Lambourne dies. Mrs. Ellington tells the two men that Lambourne, who was very fond of her, confessed to her that he had murdered the boys to throw suspicion on her husband, whom he hated. They feel that Lambourne killed himself to escape a conviction of double murder, but caution her to say nothing of the confession. The world believes, as Headmaster Roseveare pointed out, that Lambourne died accidentally from an overdose of veronal. Guthrie tells Revell that Lambourne, in the war, had just escaped death by court-martial for cowardice.

CHAPTER XXIII.

REVELL STROLLED OUT into the warming air. Summer at Oakington was really rather delightful, with the clank-clank of the roller over the cricket-pitch and the songs of the birds in the high trees.

As he passed the front entrance of Ellington's house he saw, emerging from the porch, Mrs. Ellington with a man whom he did not recognize. She greeted him with a pleasant if rather wistful smile and hastened to introduce him to the stranger. The latter, apparently, was none other than Mr. Geoffrey Lambourne, who had come to Oakington to attend to matters connected with his brother's death. Mrs. Ellington, after a few moments, left the two men together.

Geoffrey Lambourne, on further examination, appeared as a short, rather stout man, round faced and spectacled, not much like his brother and seemingly many years his senior. They took a stroll at Revell's suggestion and Lambourne, in a delicate, rather oversensitive voice, told Revell that he was the representative of an English firm in Vienna and had come to England especially to wind up his brother's affairs. It's all been a little curious, his death, don't you think?" he said. The faintly quizzical understatement, spoken in such a quiet tone under that blazing sky, made Revell suddenly shiver.

"Very curious," he answered, guardedly.

"May I ask if you knew him well, Mr. Revell?"

"Oh, not very well. But we liked each other's company, I think."

Mr. Geoffrey Lambourne nodded. "He liked yours, at any rate. Several of his letters to me contained mentions of you."

"Really? I had no idea he would ever think me worth writing about. I certainly liked him—he had a wry sense of humor that rather appealed to me. I suppose you were very much attached to him?"

"I was." The simplicity of the admission held its own pathetic dignity. "We were the sole survivors of our family—both bachelors too, and likely to remain so." He blinked gently as he entered a patch of open sunlight. "Max was the only human being in the world I had to care about, and I or so I had imagined—occupied a similar place in his affections."

Revell was quick to notice the pluperfect tense of this last remark. "So you had imagined?" he echoed.

The other nodded. "Yes, exactly. But I had better tell you, if you are interested, just what happened when I arrived in England."

"Yes, please do."

Estate to Mrs. Ellington.

"I had been wired for, you understand, by the solicitor who acts for us both. I had naturally expected that my brother's possessions, small though they might be both in quantity and value, would pass to me in fact, we had both made wills in each other's favor some dozen years ago. Judge my surprise when the solicitor informed me that my brother, greatly against his persuasions, had made a later will dated only last year, leaving everything he had to a complete stranger."

"Indeed?"

"Yes," continued Lambourne, "I was a little hurt at first, I confess. And when I further learned that it was a woman, I was, perhaps, even annoyed."

"A woman?"

"Yes. The woman who introduced us just now. Mrs. Ellington."

"Good Lord, you don't say so?"

"You are surprised, Mr. Revell?"

"Well, yes, I must admit I am. Though really not so much, perhaps, on second thought. At least, I can think of a reason for it. Your brother certainly admired her, but I don't imagine there was ever anything like a real affair between them. Whenever your brother struck his bad patches she was able to help him in many ways—she had been a nurse, you know. I really think that's all it came to."

"Thank you, Mr. Revell. You have told me just what I wanted to know. Mrs. Ellington, whom I liked, I must say, as soon as I met her, was far too modest to explain things as you have done. I can see now exactly why my brother made his will as he did, and I'm no longer troubled about it in the least."

"It's very decent of you to tell me all this" Revell said. "I haven't been here long enough to have become really intimate with your brother, but perhaps I knew him as well as any of the others did."

"Better, I am sure. You knew, of course, about his war experiences?"

"You mean about his—er—his court-martial and all that?"

Lambourne No Coward.

Lambourne, however, showed by a sudden clouding over his normally benignant countenance that he had not meant any such thing. When he replied there was even a mild ring of indignation in his tones. "Good heavens, Mr. Revell, am I to understand that the story of his one single lapse followed him here? It was a thing that ought to have been forgotten long ago. He was among the first to enlist when the war broke out, and for two years he waged a constant battle against his own nerves. At last his nerve gave way. He was court-martialed. He would doubtless have been shot but for the pleading of an officer who understood him a little. And afterward he went back to the trenches and never gave way again till a particularly bad headsmash caused him to be sent home. In all, he fought for nearly three years, was wounded four times and also badly gassed. I defy anyone to call that the record of a coward!"

And Mr. Geoffrey Lambourne looked, for the moment, as if he really were capable of defiance.

"I should say not!" Revell answered. "I think it's one of the pluckiest records I ever heard of."

The other warmed to his sympathy. "I knew you would think so. My brother wrote to me that he felt you as a kindred spirit. The trouble with him was always that he was too imaginative, too sensitive to things that other people hardly felt at all. He often worried over other people's troubles far more than they did themselves. They never knew it, of course. He hid everything behind that mask of cynicism. But Mrs. Ellington saw beneath it, apparently. Perhaps you did, also. Was he comfortable here—in his work, I mean?"

"I think so. Oh yes, I'm pretty sure he was." For a moment Revell had a wild idea that he would tell Geoffrey Lambourne the whole amazing story of his brother's confession. Nothing but vague caution prevented him; it would be safer, he felt, on second thoughts, to let the whole unpleasant business remain as it was. There was no knowing Geoffrey would do if he were told, and whatever he might choose to do could hardly lead to anything but further trouble.

Women Usurp Another Male Style—Spats

They're Slimming to Ankles and Warm, Too, When Winter Winds Blow.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

PA-LEASE! Look what's happened now! It's spats for women. Poor men. It's a losing battle they wage. Seasons past have seen their sweethearts, wives and daughters usurp their styles in man-tailored suits, in soft felts and what-not. And now, it's spats. They're in with a bang!

And why shouldn't they be? They're frightfully becoming to women. They fit snugly over the foot and ankle and give the slimming look who wouldn't adore. They're warm, too. On these clear cold days when galoshes are bunglesome and bothersome, a pair of spats checks the wintry wind's vicious nip.

One local store is showing nine-button spats in jersey cloth in gray and fawn. Or in gabardine in blue and Dubonnet.

Bobby Pins That Stay.

AN ANSWER to a woman's prayer has just taken its stand on the counter of a certain notions department. It's a bobby pin that really holds! It won't break, nor bend, nor do any of those things it shouldn't. As a matter of fact, it is so ingeniously made that it more or less snaps together. And stays that way.

If you have pesky strands of hair that belie your careful grooming, if you have a wave that runs riot all over your head, if you have bangs you are trying to train back—you'll find these bobby pins godsends. No kidding!

Easy Hair Remover.

ONE of the quickest and easiest-to-use hair removers is the little round pad that fits over your hand and literally rubs the hair away. Something very much like it has been on the market for, lo, these many years, but this particular product is new, improved, and so, so, so inexpensive. In fact—six of the pads cost only 35 cents!

Durable Crepe Hose.

THE hose of the future are undoubtedly those making their debut in a downtown store. Talk about smooth lines and perfect fit. And lasting qualities. And thrilling sheerness.

They're known as crepe hose, for although there's not a semblance of crinkyness about them, they have that old stretch-ability. It's this faculty that makes them so lasting, for when they catch they don't snag as quickly.

The young woman displaying the hose summed them up when she said, "They look like three-thread type and wear like a five-thread or service chiffon."

New Perfume Container.

THERE'S no denying that a Stowaway is a bargain. It is the fascinating perfums container made of fluted composition, and ideally suited to purses and traveling bags. It comes to you filled with a dram of perfume made by one of the largest and best-known perfume houses in the world. You have a choice of any number of truly delightful scents.

Stowaways are available in green, white, blue and red for only 75 cents (including perfume).

Meals of Child May Be Eaten In 20 Minutes

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

DOGS bolt their food without chewing, so why worry about children when they do the same thing? No doubt nature tells them what is best to do. On the other hand, cows chew their food over and over again. Why not use the cow as a model for the children to follow?

From the point of view of the innocent bystander who must watch one child swallowing his meals whole and wait while the other chews every mouthful for ten minutes, a middle course would seem desirable. It is necessary to consider the other fellow's comfort as much as one's own when one is eating.

But the question of masticating food is not merely a matter of manners and conventions. The physiological aspects are quite as important. With the human animal at least, the process of digestion starts in the mouth. Food is more easily taken care of in the stomach if it is first mixed with saliva in the mouth. There is no need to chew every mouthful for a fixed count of 50 or 100 times, for various consistencies require a different amount of chewing to prepare them for the stomach. Nor is it necssary to prolong a meal until it laps over into the next.

Twenty minutes to half an hour is enough time to allow a child for his meal. Many children, however, after they have passed the period where the awkwardness of handling spoon and fork necessarily makes eating slow, will bolt their food in five minutes and run off to play.

It is not a bad plan in such cases to oblige them to stay at the table until everyone is through eating. When they find that speed is of no advantage, they probably will eat more slowly so as to avoid "just sitting" while the others eat.

MRS. D. A. McDOUGAL.

Politics, Poetry Guide to Career Of Noted Clubwoman Here

Organized Longfellow Society With Spool as Gavel; Wife of Mississippi Lawyer Has Won Acclaim as Organizer.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WHEN SHE WAS 10 YEARS old, Myrtle Archer organized a "Longfellow Society" to interest her playmates in poetry. The gavel she used at the opening meeting was a work of art made of a pencil stuck into the side of a spool of thread.

Since then, gavels of all sizes and descriptions have taken their places beside that first one. The Myrtle Archer, of Mississippi is now Mrs. D. A. McDougal, of Washington, nationally known clubwoman, lecturer and organizer.

Any resident of Oklahoma who sees that "of Washington" written after Mrs. McDougal's name will object. She has lived in Oklahoma a number of years and still has a home in Sapulpa. She was president of the Indian Territory Federation of Women's Clubs before Oklahoma was granted statehood. She was the first national Democratic committeewoman from Oklahoma, and still holds that position.

Guides of Life.

"Politics and poetry have always been two of my major interests," she said yesterday. "I don't know which comes first."

From the time she went to Oklahoma, the bride of a young lawyer, Mrs. McDougal has been active in all types of club work, has won a reputation as an organizer whose vision is nicely balanced with an astounding amount of vitality and a way of "putting over" whatever interests her.

So when Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, needed a poetry chairman, the first person she thought of was Mrs. McDougal.

Now, already starting out on a systematic basis, the new chairman has a clearly defined idea for getting the work under way. Yesterday in her apartment at the La Salle, she told something about it—how she plans to get it started, and what she hopes will be the result.

Clinic Is Proposed.

"A 'Poetry Clinic' is what I have in mind," she said. "We will start one here in Washington first, and as soon as it is going, others can be organized throughout the country."

Her purpose in establishing such a "clinic" is to give all poets an audience, and to provide stimulation, helpful criticism and encouragement for them.

"Every two weeks, beginning this month, there will be a meeting at the Raleigh Hotel, where poets (and poetasters) may read their work—or have it read—and receive criticism," she said. "Prizes will be awarded from time to time and there will be round-table discussions to determine the worth of poems and to suggest markets for saleable verse."

She also pointed out she is already planning a Poetry Festival to be held in Washington in 1937. "This should draw versemakers from every State and even from some foreign countries," she averred. "Outstanding poets and critics will be speakers, annual National prizes will be awarded, and opportunity for unknown poets to confer with professional ones will be given."

Talent of D. C. Cited.

Numerous queries have already come to Mrs. McDougal regarding the local poetry clinic. "I think we will discover Washington has plenty of poets, recognized and unrecognized, who will help make these meetings worth while," she said.

Mrs. McDougal believes "Almost every person at some time or other wants to write poetry, to release some emotion that cannot be expressed in any other way.

"If men and women were trained to write both poetry and prose as they are trained to practice law or medicine, I wonder what the result would be," she continued. "Writing is one of the most exacting, the most difficult, of all professions; yet one is expected to be born to it, to turn out books of poetry and prose without any special preparation and with no encouragement at all.

"If half the attention lavished on poets who have 'arrived' were paid to help some of those still in the struggling stage, there is no telling what the result would be."

Mrs. McDougal's special forte has been clubwork and homemaking. Intimate friends will tell you, however, she is a poet herself. She denies the latter. "My daughters are the writing members of my family," she explains.

But in the volume "Wandering Fires," a book of verse written by Mary and Violet McDougal, there is one poem, "From a City Window," that proves the mother also knows a good deal about poetry.

Miss Violet McDougal, who was swept into the national spotlight when she was appointed poet laureate of Oklahoma, is now in Washington, busy writing fiction. Another lives in Oklahoma. The third, Mary McDougal Axelson, of New York, is the author of the play, "Life Begins," which was a Broadway success and is now running in Vienna, Paris, London and Prague.

Passing of Old Kettle for Soup Causes Regret

By Elisabeth Ellicott Poe.

THE BIG SOUP kettle, simmering on the back of the stove and increasing in savor from day to day as its contents were increased by leftovers of meat, vegetables and other tidbits, is a thing of the past—more's the pity—in most American kitchens.

In cold weather there is no better start to any dinner than good, nourishing soup. It has value both as an appetizer and for its food value as well.

Should Know Rules.

There are a few general rules about soup making and serving every homemaker should bear in mind.

Clear soups, like bouillon, consomme and plain meat soups, possess little fuel values in themselves, but start the flow of gastric juices and create appetite.

In planning thick cream soups and purees remember that they are sufficiently nourishing to provide a substantial food value to the menu.

Jellied soup is made easily from any highly seasoned clear stock, and it has a definite appeal to the most languid appetite on a hot day.

Brown Soup Stock.

4 pounds shin or shank of beef
2 tablespoons beef drippings
3½ quarts of water
½ tablespoon pickle spice
1 cup chopped celery leaves
¼ cup each, chopped carrots, onions and turnips
1 tablespoon salt.

Cut meat from bone, brown in drippings. Add water and cracked bone, bring slowly to boiling point, cover closely and simmer about three hours. Add remaining ingredients and cracked bone, bring slowly to boiling point, cover closely and simmer an hour. Strain. Cool uncovered and remove fat. Then heat to boiling point, stirring constantly, and let boil vigorously for five minutes. Add a little water, cool slightly, skim and strain.

White Soup Stock.

3½ pounds knuckle of veal
2½ quarts cold water
1 medium-sized onion
¼ cup fresh or 2 tablespoons dried celery leaves
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon mace
½ teaspoon pickle spice.

Cut meat from bone in small pieces. Then add it to the water, heating gradually to boiling point. Add other ingredients, cover closely and simmer about four hours, replenishing the water sufficiently to keep the amount of liquid 2 quarts. Strain, cool and remove any fat or scum.

When summer comes try this recipe for uncooked peach soup.

Skin and pit 12 large ripe peaches. Slice thinly, sprinkle with sugar and let stand one hour. To each pint of juice add a teaspoon of ground almond meats, and one-third pint of grape juice. Chill and serve. Will serve eight persons.

Poor Cooking Often Causes 'Pork Disease'

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

THE wide prevalence of pork worm disease—trichinella spiralis—disturbs most of us little, but occasionally there are outbreaks with fatal results to a number of individuals. The infestation of human beings occurs as the result of eating raw or improperly cooked pork or pork products which contain the larvae of trichina.

The first symptom noted will be an intense inflammation of the intestinal tract which may continue for a week. If several members of the family have partaken of the same type of food more than one will probably be ill. During this acute stage the worms are developing in the human intestine, finally boring through the walls. They mature in about a week, when the females start producing embryos which find their way into the blood vessels and lymphatics—sometimes in great numbers. This is indicated by the fact that a single female may give birth to as many as 1,500 or more larvae.

Causes Severe Pain.

From seven to ten days after eating uncooked or underdone pork the larvae begins to invade the muscles and the patient may have chills with a high temperature—as high as 104 degrees F. There is sometimes considerable swelling of the face and eyes and extreme pain in the muscles, particularly those of the legs, shoulders and back. The diaphragm may be so severely involved that each breath causes excruciating pain. Now and then the muscles are exceedingly tender when touched. Inasmuch as the severity of symptoms depends entirely upon the number of worms that penetrate the tissues, a confusing picture results as mild cases unaccompanied by severe pain are not infrequent. Distressing symptoms rarely occur if the number of worms is small.

How common is the disease? Authorities believe that from 1 to 2 per cent of all swine in the United States are infected with the pork worm. In 1931 Frank Queen, of the University of Rochester, found the trichina in the muscles of 59 out of 344 consecutive autopsies; in other words, 17⅛ per cent. A smaller number in Boston revealed 27.6 per cent positive. In 1934 an autopsy report from the University of Minnesota showed 17.9 per cent with trichinosis.

Prevention Needed.

From these figures it would appear that a great many more persons have the disease than is generally supposed. Evidently, in a large number of cases, the condition was not extensive and the attack may have been interpreted at the time as a digestive upset due to food poisoning. In a recent report from Louisiana it was shown that in a series of 200 consecutive examinations seven, or 3½ per cent, were found infected. No one of the seven recalled symptoms of trichinia poisoning.

Because there is no known drug or chemical that can be injected into the blood stream that will destroy the worms, prevention is of the utmost importance. Inasmuch as Government inspection of meats in packing houses does not guarantee freedom from trichina, it becomes necessary to make certain that all pork or pork products are thoroughly cooked before consumption.

If symptoms develop the bowels should be thoroughly evacuated and some physicians believe that colon irrigations are of value.

When the patient recovers the worms may remain embedded in the muscles for a long time—even years—the coiled worms becoming encased in a sort of capsule that consists of scar tissue with deposits of lime. One attack does not confer immunity and the individual may be the subject of a second or third illness if uncooked diseased pork is again eaten.

Woman Employe of Government Expresses Surprise at Answer Given "J. A. S.;" She Prefers to Go Unattended to Dancing Classes.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: As one more girl brought to Washington by Government work and thoroughly conversant with the problem of finding suitable social diversion for girls in Washington, I must say I am very much surprised by the attitude you take in your answer to the letter signed "J. A. S.," published in your column on February 1.

Many girls here are employed in offices where the men workers are married. It is possible to meet nice people through the churches, if one is very much interested in church work, willing to devote considerable time to it and wait a year or so to make the right contacts, although the percentage of eligible young men in churches is rather low.

• • • •

Your suggestion that a girl can summon a tennis-playing man friend to an afternoon game, or another for an early morning rise is scarcely practicable, when one considers that the girls to whom such a suggestion is directed have had no chances to meet such men. Usually tennis partners simply cannot be found. The alternative is to go alone to the municipal golf course, where a girl will be placed in a foursome with three other persons, usually men; and, although my golf is of tournament caliber and much admired by men, I cannot recommend this method of meeting people. I suppose men of the class with whom I should care to associate usually belong to clubs which are out of my financial reach.

• • • •

The night clubs (the only dancing places available to homeless strangers here) have small dance floors, are invariably crowded and there are long pauses between the dances, as the proprietors wish the guests to have ample time for buying drinks. Also this is expensive amusement to be paid for by a casual acquaintance, and I do not care for drinking.

Perhaps a "sensitive, sheltered, demure girl" (to use your words) might not find it pleasant to go to a dance alone or with a girl friend, but a well-reared girl can be "truly feminine" and still enjoy dancing without an escort. Personally I prefer to go alone to dancing school, as I am not interested in any one man to the exclusion of others and like variety in partners. A male escort seems to think he should have most of your dances.

• • • •

Also your idea is entirely erroneous that the girls who attend such dances alone are not good dancers, do not look well in evening clothes, or do not have the necessary ease of manner which would make for enjoyment of a dance. Most of the girls who attend dancing school are pretty, graceful and attractive in every way. And they do have a good time. All dances are taken for most of them and sometimes are engaged well in advance.

No one can go to the particular place I have in mind without an introduction furnished by a person holding an entrance card. In order to help you understand how well the situation is handled I hope you will take the trouble to attend at least one dance and am sure one of your correspondents would be glad to introduce you.

FUN-LOVING GIRL.

Live and Let Live.

DEAR F. L. G.: In Andre Maurois' "Ariel: The Life of Shelley," there is a statement to the effect: "To enjoy life and help others to enjoy it, without harming anyone, herein lies the whole of morality and comfort." That, to me, is a most persuasive presentation of the theory of live and let live, a theory to which I subscribe wholeheartedly. You misunderstand me entirely if you suppose I have any desire to set myself up as a dogmatic authority on what is fitting and proper conduct. My only purpose is to give, out of my own experience, suggestions which may possibly make for greater happiness for the individual who solicits my advice on how to achieve a nearer approach to that enviable state.

• • • •

If you will re-read my comment on the letter signed "J. A. S." in this column of February 1, you will discover no statement to the effect that "girls who attend dances alone are not good dancers, do not look well in evening clothes or do not have the necessary ease of manner which make for enjoyment of a dance." What was written was exactly this: "Unless a girl has mastered the technique of compelling the admiring notice of men; unless she knows how to keep an attentive man at her elbow; unless she looks unusually well in evening clothes, is a graceful dancer and has a gay, carefree, nonchalant manner, the odds are against her having much fun at a dance."

• • • •

If a girl is at once so self sufficient and so fond of dancing that she actually enjoys going to properly chaperoned dances without a self appointed squire, her action in doing so will arouse no solicitous reaction in me. But if, as in the case of "Unpopular" (whose letter published January 27 incited this discussion, by the way) a girl chooses that method of finding men friends and goes dancing unattended time and again only to find herself in the end as lonely for men friends as before, it behooves her advisor to help her work out a new approach to her goal. Suggestions given here for helping "Unpopular" revise her technique need not be construed as applying to girls such as you who are, to quote your own words, "thoroughly conversant with the problem of finding suitable social diversion." For, as has been said before, what is one man's meat is another man's poison.

M. H.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

SHE'S as perky as a canary and just as pretty. But that doesn't keep her from having two of the most strong, capable hands ever. When she got married, for instance, her young man gave her a very brave little homefurnishing budget and she managed beautifully in a tiny apartment just built for two. Now they've moved and have an extra room so that the lesser things in their first living room will go into the additional space and another budget includes money for a new rug and new draperies for the living room. What shall they be? she asks. She's clever about doing all kinds of jobs, so the money to be spent can go into the actual purchases. Their furniture is maple, the walls yellow, and she's crazy for a carpet.

We'd have that carpet in a lovely soft old blue and the draperies in a riotously flowered chintz in a quaint old-time design—over white curtains—then white accessories.

Island Group Claims Food Needed Badly

Red Cross Chief Declares Supplies at Smiths Are Adequate.

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Md., Feb. 6.—Eight hundred pounds of food were flown to Tangier Island, Va., today. The island has been isolated by ice for a month or more.

The supplies were ferried over to the island by Capt. Forrest Wenyon, former British army pilot, who was engaged by Col. Albanus Phillips, Cambridge food packer. Capt. Wenyon was directed to fly to the island to check reports that the residents possessed ample food supplies.

He affirmed the report of Mrs. Theodore Phillips that food stores were depleted. She made a report yesterday.

J. Millard Tawes, Red Cross chairman at Crisfield, however, flew to Smiths Island, which is near Tangier, yesterday and reported sufficient food there.

The statements, Capt. Wenyon revealed, were signed by the Rev. Harry M. Bailey, Red Cross chairman; Mayor W. T. Cockett and Town Councilman J. T. Pruitt.

"As chairman of the Red Cross on Tangier Island and as pastor of the only church on the island, as Mayor of Tangier Island, and as a member of the town council of Tangier Island, we state we are desperately in need of essential food," they said.

"The report that we do not need food is incorrect."

Capt. Wenyon said: "General conditions on the island are healthy. Everbody seems quite happy. They don't seem to be suffering in appearance, but they say they are out of food and by tomorrow they will be entirely out. There is just a small shortage of medical supplies."

The pilot also brought a bag of mail which will be posted here. He revealed that a physician and two nurses had been landed on the island from Virginia. He gave their names as a Dr. Gladstone, M. A. Slaughter and K. M. Smiley.

100 Landed at Isle.

Baltimore, Feb. 6 (AP).—Gov. Harry W. Nice today received a radiogram from Maj. Enoch B. Garey, State police head, reporting that approximately 100 men "are being landed on Tangier and Smiths islands."

The radiogram, sent from the Coast Guard cutter Travis, stated:

"Through the co-operation of Lieut. Short, commanding officer of the Coast Guard cutter Travis, approximately 100 men are being landed on Tangier and Smiths islands. The husbands and fathers are homesick for their families and have been needlessly disturbed over exaggerated reports from the islands.

"Shortage of medicine for colds yesterday, and this promptly supplied by airplane. No special problems now that men are being returned to their homes. Precautionary measures taken for anything reasonable that may arise.

"Edward Thompson, from Salisbury, is setting up temporary radio set for a few days on Smith's Island. Having Sergt. Hunter remain on island for couple of days. Other State police ordered back to their stations. Sergt. Katz will return tonight to give you personal report.

"What little there has been to the affair, the Red Cross and the Coast Guard have disposed of. Mr. Phillips, in Cambridge, has been helpful."

The islanders made the last lap by walking on the ice approximately 3 miles after having crossed the cleared channel on the Coast Guard cutter. They had walked on the ice 4 miles from Crisfield to the ship.

Talbot Suffers.

Easton, Md., Feb. 6 (AP).—The condition of many Talbot County watermen is much worse than that of residents of ice-bound Tangier Island and Smiths Island, Arthur E. Hungerford, director of the National Emergency Council for Maryland, told the Talbot County commissioners and board of welfare today.

Hungerford came to Easton to confer with the county officials regarding co-ordination of Federal activities here.

It was ascertained that most watermen have been unable to earn their livelihood since the freeze began more than a month ago. Indications now are, he said, that the watermen will be unable to support themselves until late in May or early in June, when the crabbing season gets under way.

Hungerford said he was informed that since January 1 a total of 63 watermen have been forced to apply for relief because of the freeze.

Londoners Get First Meats Since Sunday

London, Feb. 6 (U.P.).—Ten million Londoners and suburbanites today ate their first fresh meat since Sunday as temporary depots, under heavy guard, distributed supplies in the area affected by the strike of Smithfield market workers.

Strike leaders were expected to call off the walkout over the week-end and the workers probably will return to their jobs Monday.

The Smithfield market, which distributes more than 500,000 tons of meat in London annually, is the largest in the world.

Reserve Board Maps Simple Broker Rules

By the Associated Press.

Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the re-organized Federal Reserve Board, yesterday reported that simpler and more uniform credit requirements for both brokers and bankers constituted the immediate goal of the new board.

At a press conference called to introduce the four new members of the board Eccles said complaints had been received that the present requirements for brokers were too complex, and too difficult to administer.

An effort to overcome the objection, he said, will be written into regulation "U," governing the amounts banks may loan on securities. This regulation has never been issued, but recommendations for it now are being studied by Reserve banks and the American Bankers Association.

On broker margin requirements the board raised the limits from 45 to 55 per cent, with a sliding scale underneath this figure.

If feasible, the regulation governing bank credit will be reduced to the utmost in simplicity, Eccles said, and then regulation "T," governing brokers' requirements will be rewritten in conformity.

Meantime, however, present broker regulations will remain in effect.

Eccles said the open-market committee of the system, which charts the system's participation in the Government bond market, would be organized shortly after March 1, the date it takes office.

The board will have the dominant voice on this committee as it will consist of the seven members of the new board and five representatives chosen by the banks.

Arms-Running Denied By Swedish Red Cross

Addis Ababa, Feb. 6 (AP).—An affidavit by a Belgian officer denying Italian claims that a quantity of munitions was found in Swedish Red Cross trucks was published today by the Ethiopian government.

(Italy claimed 27 boxes of munitions were found in the unit, captured recently on the southern front. Sweden denied that the unit had more arms than it was legally entitled to carry under international Red Cross conventions.)

The Ethiopian communique asserted the Italians must have put the cartridges in the trucks to "thus further damage the good name of a neutral power."

Tugwell Cites Resettlement's Aid to Families

Says 2,000,000 Are Helped in Agricultural Area by Administration.

The Resettlement Administration is getting real results in helping people get on their feet, Rexford G. Tugwell, resettlement administrator, told a radio audience last night.

Citing a number of specific examples of the manner in which farm families have been helped, Tugwell said that 420,000 such families—2,000,000 persons—have been assisted.

"It is a program designed to give the distressed farmer a new opportunity to earn an honest and decent living."

"Sometimes," he said, "the problem is good land—the Government can help the farmer find a good farm to rent. More often a farmer needs tools, machinery or fertilizer. In that case, Resettlement helps him with a small loan to make these purchases."

Tugwell said that many thousands of farmers need nothing more than advice and guidance and that this is given by county supervisors. He stressed the fact that farmers are encouraged to raise food crops for their own consumption as well as cash crops.

Long Left No Will, Widow Tells Court

New Orleans, Feb. 6 (AP).—A petition filed in civil district court today by Charles P. Rivet, attorney for Mrs. Huey P. Long, declared her late husband, Senator Huey P. Long, died without leaving a will.

On Mrs. Long's petition the court had given Rivet authority to search bank lock boxes which might contain the will, but Rivet said no trace of any last testament was found.

He said Mrs. Long would petition the court to be named executrix of her husband's estate, and that an inventory would be taken and filed with the court.

Under Louisiana law a widow receives half of the community property of her husband and self and the remaining half is divided among all forced heirs, which in Senator Long's case, would be their three children.

New York Vice Drive Brings 10 Indictments

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—Ten men were indicted on compulsory prostitution charges today by an extraordinary grand jury that heard testimony of scores of women rounded up in a series of week-end raids.

The men were described by Special Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey as principal figures in a commercialized vice combination operating more than 200 houses in New York with an annual income of $12,000,000. The women, 80 in number, were held in $10,000 bail each as material witnesses.

Canal Paving Plan Is Urged By Van Duzer

Widening of K Street, Other Remedies Are Suggested.

A proposal to drain the old C. & O. Canal and convert it into a modern, through-traffic highway was offered yesterday by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer as he continued testimony before a special Congressional sub-committee investigating Washington traffic conditions.

Van Duzer's suggestion was included among a series of recommendations presented as possible remedies.

The proposed highway would be constructed along the canal bottom and serve as a direct by-pass through Georgetown. A ramp leading from Key Bridge would connect with the new road, Van Duzer pointed out.

"This would also serve as a link in the proposed memorial highway between Washington and Gettysburg, Pa.," he added. "Traffic from the North and South could be by-passed through the city with little trouble and no congestion."

Cites M-Street Jam.

To support his plan, Van Duzer pointed out that M street, between Twenty-ninth street and Key Bridge, is the "tightest traffic spot in Washington."

"In the peak of rush-hour periods," he said, "M street carries 2,600 vehicles an hour. My plan to construct a highway on the canal bed would relieve this situation."

Other recommendations offered by Van Duzer included an underpass for street cars beneath Dupont Circle; redesign of Thomas Circle to create more space for vehicular traffic; widening of K street under a plan that would provide a 40-foot center roadway for fast-moving traffic, flanked on either side by smaller lanes for slow-moving vehicles and for parking.

He also suggested that pedestrian underpasses be constructed at Fifteenth street and New York avenue northwest, Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest and Twelfth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

K-Street Congestion.

Van Duzer's suggestion to widen K street came after Representative Carpenter (Democrat), Kansas, chairman of the sub-committee, remarked that he had noticed "a bad congestion problem" during a recent traffic tour.

These remedial plans have already been approved by Capt. Herbert C. Whitehurst, director of highways, Van Duzer declared.

The pedestrian underpasses, Van Duzer said, would aid greatly in affording protection to some 30,000 Government employes who work in the area south of Pennsylvania avenue.

Describing the sidewalk around Thomas Circle as a "pedestrian hazard," Van Duzer urged its removal not only to protect pedestrians but to provide additional space for traffic movement around the circle.

Military Road Up.

Representative Carpenter questioned Van Duzer about the effect on Washington traffic if Military road, adjacent to Washington Airport in nearby Virginia, is closed.

"That would continue to throw traffic onto Highway Bridge," replied Van Duzer.

M. O. Eldridge, assistant traffic director, attending the hearing with Van Duzer, added that closing of the road would shunt traffic to Columbia pike in Arlington County.

"But that is a Virginia problem," he said.

Recent icy streets have brought a sudden rise in traffic accidents, Van Duzer testified. He pointed out that there were 53 accidents last Monday.

Back to Normal.

"That was a big increase, but yesterday (Tuesday) there were only 23, which is about normal," said the traffic director.

Offering another plan to aid in decreasing Washington's traffic toll, Van Duzer suggested the appointment of a safety promotion director to his department.

After returning to the subject of pedestrian control, Van Duzer also advocated strict regulations governing "walkers as well as drivers." A new form of safety zones was also suggested.

"Our present safety zones give the pedestrian a false sense of safety," said Van Duzer.

A technical discussion of traffic lights followed and the hearing adjourned until today at 10 a. m.

D. C. Employes Warned to Observe 'Gag' After Threat by Blanton

Pope to Design Museum Here For Mellon Art

The rare art collection of Andrew W. Mellon will be assembled in a museum to be designed by John Russell Pope, of New York, this country's outstanding architect.

His appointment was announced yesterday by the A. W. Mellon Educational and Charitable Trust, which administers the $10,000,000 fund provided by Mellon for the erection in the Capital of a national gallery of art.

In the museum will be housed the $30,000,000 collection of masterpieces, assembled by the former Secretary of the Treasury during his 40 years as a connoisseur of art.

Pope is now engaged in preliminary studies for the selection of a site for the art gallery. In this work he is being assisted by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

The architect is the only American expert who was ever commissioned by the British government, having been engaged to plan the extensions to the British Museum.

Pope is also architect for the extensions of the Tate gallery in London and the Metropolitan museum in New York. He is also architect for the Theodore Roosevelt Memorial Hall, the Natural History Museum, New York; the Frick Gallery in New York, and the Baltimore Museum of Art.

Among the buildings he designed in Washington are the Archives Building, the Scottish Rite Temple on Sixteenth street, and the headquarters of the Pharmaceutical Institute.

Drama Performance Is Extended by Guild

The Blackfriars Guild announced last night that an extra performance would be given of "The First Legion," by Emmet Lavery, in the auditorium of St. Paul's Church, 1421 V street northwest, at 2:30 p. m.

The extension of the play beyond Saturday night was decided on because of the heavy attendance.

Hearings on District's Budget Are Begun; Due to Be Brief.

Bound by an even stricter "gag rule" than usual, District officials opened their testimony yesterday before the House sub-committee on District appropriations at hearings which promised to be short but colorful.

As the hearings began, it developed that Chairman Blanton (Democrat), of Texas, has sent a letter to the Commissioners warning them no District official or employe was to reveal anything that goes on in the executive sessions.

Blanton, who has several times threatened to cut off the salaries of District employes who dared to challenge his dictatorship of local finances, made it plain that punitive measures would be invoked if necessary to insure secrecy.

Upon receiving the command, the Commissioners dispatched an order to all department heads.

Ruling Cited.

It said:

"It must be thoroughly understood that the hearings before the committee are executive and no information is to be released. Heads of departments will be held strictly accountable and responsible for any information so divulged."

While the House sub-committee has always conducted its hearings in executive session, news of what goes on has frequently found its way into the press.

Yesterday District officials were careful to avoid even the appearance of evil by walking on the other side of corridors when a newspaperman came into sight.

At the District Building the Commissioners only vaguely recalled that they had received a letter of instructions from Blanton, and no one appeared able to locate the important document.

Admits Sending Letter.

Blanton, upon being questioned by newspapermen on Capitol Hill, admitted sending the letter and stated he would release copies later in the day. About 6 o'clock he said that Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, would make public the communication with his permission, but Maj. Donovan had gone home and could not be reached.

Representative Ditter (Republican), of Pennsylvania, was noticeably absent during at least part of the hearing, and the two Democratic colleagues of Blanton were reported to have done practically none of the talking.

The hearings are not expected to continue as long as usual this year as Blanton said he was interested in hearing testimony only on the major items. He intimated the sub-committee will hew close to the Budget Bureau's recommendations of a $43,100,000 budget, more than $4,000,000 under the District estimates.

Investigation Of City Taxes Is Proposed

A resolution calling upon the Speaker to appoint a committee of seven members of the House to investigate the various form of municipal taxation and assessments in the District was introduced yesterday by Representative Zioncheck (Democrat), of Washington.

In a preamble, Zioncheck stated that local rentals have been constantly increasing, while wages to apartment house and hotel employes have been decreasing along with interest rates and real and personal property tax assessments.

The personal tax record of the Carlton Hotel is incorporated in the resolution as an example of lack of collections and reduced assessments.

The record, dating back to 1928, shows that the owners of the Carlton Hotel failed to pay personal property tax assessments aggregating nearly $15,000 during the years 1930, 1931 and 1932.

District tax officials explained that the hotel changed hands several times in this period and that personal property assessments involving hotels are collectible only from the owner at the time covered by the assessment.

The tax record also shows that the assessments dropped from more than $4,000 to $1,476 in the fiscal year 1936.

Health Board Budget Is Cut; City Suffers

Lack of Funds Places District in Dire Need of Services.

Ruhland Request Pared to $505,460 With More Slashes Likely.

With health items trimmed deeply by the Budget Bureau, the 1937 District budget is now receiving Congressional consideration. The Washington Post desires that this city have the best health department in the Nation. This is the first of a series of articles designed to show Congress the District's health needs.

By Gerald G. Gross.

The District Health Department, which is directed by physicians and surgeons, submits to more surgery than it performs. And without benefit of anesthetic or desensitizer.

The first ones to cry "Ouch!" when the proposed budget, flesh and blood of the department, is slashed here and slashed there in its route from one operating room to the other, are Health Officer George C. Ruhland, the Tuberculosis Association and the District Medical Society.

Sooner or later, the cry is taken up by thousands of Washingtonians, who are slower to realize the implications of living in a city that has the second highest tuberculosis death rate in the Nation and lacks an adequate public nursing service, adequate public school medical inspection facilities—even adequate housing for its board of health.

Surgery on Budget.

Extended over a period of months and anything but painless, the surgery on the 1937 budget has followed this course to date:

Last August, Dr. Ruhland, submitting to the District Commissioners his estimates for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1936, asked $805,250 to run his department. This figure was an increase of $131,080 over the budget for the current year.

The Commissioners reached for the economy scalpel and trimmed down the request to $542,202. That was last October.

In December, when the Bureau of the Budget had finished with Dr. Ruhland's carefully considered prospectus, it bore the scars of another amputation and stood at $505,460. This is the total now being wheeled into the operating room on Capitol Hill.

When it is considered that the Health Department's budget for the current year is only $474,200, or $31,000 below the figure for 1936-37 approved by the Bureau of the Budget, the impulse may be to minimize the damaging effects of this fiscal surgery.

"After all, Dr. Ruhland, you're getting a raise, aren't you?"

Per Capita Fee Too Low.

But Dr. Ruhland has an Augean stable on his hands and that additional $31,000—which is still on paper—is only another pail or two of water.

The capital of the United States is spending 80 cents per person per resident for public health work. According to national standards, the per capita ante should be $2.

The death rate in Washington is surpassed only by Nashville's, and the death rate from tuberculosis alone is a bare second to San Antonio's.

Although its activities are truly a matter of life and death, the Health Department is compelled, year in and year out, to cope with office congestion that renders efficient administratoin well nigh impossible, and a balky bacteriological laboratory whose equipment is obsolete for the most part, not to mention the serious problems arising from insufficient funds to carry on food and sanitary inspection, preventable-disease control, collection of vital statistics and numerous other duties.

Much has been made of the scarcity of beds for tuberculosis patients and the shortage of nurses at Gallinger Hospital and at the tuberculosis sanitarium for children at Glenn Dale, Md. These are splendid talking points, of course, but to obtain an idea of the public health situation, laughable if it were not pathetic, which persists here, one need not even venture forth from the District Building.

Entering the second-floor door marked "Health Department," one comes into a room which is about one-third the size of the average reception chamber accorded a Cabinet member. Here, in the one little community house, are clustered three division chiefs, the chief clerk, the switchboard, messengers and various other attaches.

The chiefs of school medical inspection and the child hygiene service are among those quartered here, almost cheek to jowl, and it is not at all unusual for the room to have a long line of youngsters awaiting their turn for physical examination.

"It makes an interesting picture, to say the least," commented one doctor, "with lads removing their shirts, Dr. Cumming (chief of the Preventable Diseases Bureau) trying to interview some one, telephones ringing, children chattering and messengers passing to and fro, all in one room."

Rep. and Mrs. Barry Admitted to U. S. Bar

REPRESENTATIVE AND MRS. WILLIAM BARRY.

Husband-and-Wife Legal Firm Believed First to Practice.

The law firm of Barry & Barry was admitted to practice yesterday before the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals.

The firm consists of Representative William B. Barry (Democrat), of the Second New York District, and his wife, the former Emily B. LaMude. It is believed this is the first time a husband and wife had been admitted to practice before the court.

Representative Barry is a new member of the House, having been elected last Novmber to fill the unexpired term of Representative William F. Bfrunner, resigned. For that matter, he also is a comparative newlywed. He and Mrs. Barry will observe their third wedding anniversary today.

They both were graduated from New York University Law School, he in 1929 and she two years later. They met while he was assistant district attorney of Queens County, N. Y., and she was being promoted from a clerk to an attorney in the State insurance department.

In 1934, Barry became an attorney in the custom's division of the Attorney General's office, serving under former Judge Joseph R. Jackson. It was he who yesterday made the motion to have Representative Barry and Mrs. Barry admitted to practice in the court here.

Since Mr. Barry's election to the House he and Mrs. Barry have maintained a law office in Jamaica, N. Y.

Transit Firm Asks to Buy Bus System

High Price Once Halted the Sale; Valuation Lower Now.

Terms of Plan Fail to Make Transfers Interchangeable.

Approval of the Public Utilities Commission was sought yesterday for the purchase of the Washington Rapid Transit Co. by the Capital Transit Co. for $539,623.87.

It was the second proposal formally presented to the commission by the Transit Company for purchase of the Independent Bus Co. which is owned by the North American Company, acquisition of which served as the entering wedge of outside holding companies to gain control of local utilities.

The commission rejected the first proposal in a formal order dated October 15, 1934. The company at that time proposed to pay $543,253.87 for the bus company. The commission based its refusal to approve the purchase on several grounds, but the principal one was that the price was too high.

Price Lowered.

The new purchase price, the company told the commission, is based on a careful survey by competent persons and represents what, in its opinion, a willing buyer would pay in an open market.

William A. Roberts, people's counsel, said the latest figure was in the direction of what should be paid. He warned, however, that he would give careful study to the latest proposal.

Public hearings will be held later this month. William McK. Clayton, chairman of the public utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations, is expected to take an important role in that hearing. It was suggested that the latest proposal of the company had been informally discussed between commission officials and company representatives. George Thomas Dunlop, company counsel, however, said the proposal had been filed with the commission only a few minutes before the commission made it public.

One of the important aspects of the proposal is it does not provide for immediate merger of the two companies. Under the Capital company proposal the bus company could be operated as a separate concern. In that event the commission could not compel universal transfers.

Receivers in Doubt.

The Washington Rapid Transit Co., launched by Leon Arnold, wealthy meat dealer, who subsequently sold it to Harley P. Wilson, director of the North American Co., has been losing money for many years until last year. Then its books were balanced, due in considerable part to permission by the utilities commission to cease accrual of depreciation. Since then the bus company has purchased several new buses to replace outworn equipment.

Youngster, 16, Loses His Driving Permit After Speeding, Ignoring Light, Passing Stop Signs, Driving Wrong Way

(Editor's note: In an effort to determine the answer to Washington's present traffic problem, with its mounting toll of accidents, The Post has assigned a reporter to learn the reason behind violations of traffic regulations. A reporter, accompanied by an official of the Police Traffic Division, has cruising in a police car. To vary his activities, he visited the Board of Review and Revocation of Operators Permits yesterday. It is The Post's desire merely to learn "the reason why" of the violations. This is the twenty-sixth in a series of stories.)

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Resuming our quest for the "reason why" behind traffic law violations yesterday, we again encountered a combination long recognized as one of Washington's major traffic problems—youth, gasoline and trouble.

As we "listened in" on hearings before the Board of Review and Revocation of Operators' Permits, we heard a youngster—he was just 16—plead with traffic officials to restore his right to drive. His permit had been revoked. Some time ago he was arrested and charged with speeding at 40 miles an hour, passing a red light, passing six "stop" signs and traveling the wrong way on a one-way street.

He gave his age as 17 and his case was taken into Traffic Court. Then officials found he was but 16. The charges were referred to Juvenile Court and he was placed on probation.

This youngster, from his past record, is a menace to other motorists, members of the board agreed. Not until this type of driver—young or old—is ruled from the streets will Washington's problem be relieved, declared M. O. Eldridge, chairman of the board.

But this apparently had never entered the boy's head—nor the head of his attorney. Both pleaded—and even begged—that the permit be restored.

A policeman testified that he pursued the youngster for several miles. During the chase, the fleeing driver sped through downtown streets with evident disregard for safety rules, the policeman said.

"What was your hurry?" the boy was asked.

"I wasn't in any hurry—but when I saw that policeman behind me, I got scared and tried to get away. That's why I went through the stop signs and red lights."

And then the lawyer, almost with tears in his eyes, opened his plea.

"This boy's father is dead. He is working to support his mother. He drives a truck. The family owns seven trucks, operating in Washington. They haul trash for a living."

It was pointed out by the board that when the young man applied for a permit he must have told a falsehood about his age. At that time he was only 15. And, even at that, he couldn't drive a truck under the law. He must be 18 to drive a commercial vehicle.

The boy denied he was traveling 40 miles an hour.

"How fast were you going?" he was asked.

"About 35, I guess."

"What is the speed limit?"

"Twenty-two miles an hour," was the reply.

Despite the appeals of both the youngster and his attorney, the board upheld previous findings and refused to restore the permit.

It was further testified that the accused driver was not operating one of the family's trucks when he was arrested. He was driving a pleasure car with several friends. They had just come from an uptown beer garden.

In several other cases before the board, motorists denied that they had broken the law, but policemen testified to the contrary. The accused drivers seemed to feel they were being "harassed." One man said:

"I was going to work. There was a lot of traffic on the street. I am sure I wasn't speeding. Traffic along that street (Thirteenth street northwest) usually travels about 30 miles an hour during rush hours. I was keeping in traffic lanes."

A policeman said this driver was speeding at 40 miles an hour.

"It took me four blocks to overtake him," said the officer.

"Were you watching your speedometer?" the motorist was asked.

"Well—er—no, I wasn't. Oh, but I know I wasn't speeding."

Ruth Chatterton Returns to Screen and Revives Memories of a Notable Company

Debut Made With Troupe at Old Columbia

By Nelson B. Bell.

The return of Ruth Chatterton to a local screen today serves as a reminder that she is only one of many distinguished stars of the stage, screen and radio who have launched their careers in Washington.

This was a notable group that from time to time enlisted the services of such brilliant exponents of the art of Thespis as Guy Standing—now Sir Guy, of the films—Wilton Lackaye, Julia Dean, Everett Butterfield, Jessie Glendenning, Hilda Spong, Dorothy Bernard, Charlotte Walker, mother of the screen's present character actress, Sara Haden; Paul McAllister, A. H. Van Buren and a long list of others that do not spring to a hazy memory at the moment.

In her later years on the stage, by a strange coincidence, Miss Chatterton became the artiste-protege of the late Henry Miller, one of the most skillful directors and most able actors the native stage has known.

Millers Play Hand.

The coincidence comes in by reason of the fact that that other outstanding star Washington has contributed to the stage, screen and radio, Helen Hayes, made her recent debut in "Victoria Regina" under the aegis of Gilbert Miller, son of the gentleman who had so much to do with the elevation of so many promising actresses to positions of distinction on the boards—beginning, perhaps, with Mme. Alla Nazimova, whom he brought to uptown New York from the Ghetto when she could hardly speak a word of English.

Miss Chatterton, by the way, after her long absence from the screen, now happily broken by her appearance in "A Lady of Secrets," has just drawn one of the choicest film roles of the current season.

She has been signed by Samuel Goldwyn for the role of Mrs. Dodsworth in the forthcoming screen presentation of the famous Sinclair Lewis-Sidney Howard success of "Dodsworth," one of Max Gordon's smash hits.

Eight Sought Part.

Negotiations for a star to play this important role have been going on for several months, and Goldwyn has had eight actresses under consideration at different times, a number of these asked for the part themselves.

Goldwyn and Miss Chatterton reached their agreement in the lobby of the Biltmore Theater in Los Angeles, where the stage play of "Dodsworth" recently opened. It was while the second act was in progress that the terms were made.

Sidney Howard, who dramatized the Sinclair Lewis novel, is now in Hollywood readapting "Dodsworth" for the screen.

This is Howard's second association with Goldwyn and Lewis in the adaptation of a screen play, the first having been "Arrowsmith" several seasons ago.

Come nice letters from Lou Brown, recently transferred to Baltimore from Washington as chief of Loew publicity. The first had pleasant things to say about a long professional association between him and this column; the second inclosed a clipping from the Baltimore Evening Sun in which this department was quoted at some length on the matter of a recently previewed Maryland censored print of a feature picture. It seems that the writer on the Sun and your present reporter entertain similar views on this silly business.

Academy Nominations.

It is the eagle-eyed commentator of the Associated Press who makes known to this department some of the later of the winter's "these are the best" selections.

Clark Gable, Charles Laughton, Franchot Tone and Victor McLaglen were nominated last night for the best actor's performance for the eighth annual awards of merit of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

Actresses nominated were Elizabeth Bergner, Claudette Colbert, Bette Davis, Merle Oberon, Katharine Hepburn and Miriam Hopkins.

Covering performances and productions released during 1935, the nominations will be voted upon by the academy membership during the coming month, the final winners to be announced at the annual academy banquet March 5.

Pictures nominated for the "best production" were "Alice Adams," RKO-Radio Studios; "Broadway Melody of 1936," M-G-M; "Capt. Blood," Warner Brothers; "David Copperfield," M-G-M; "The Informer," RKO-Radio; "Les Miserables," Twentieth Century-Fox; "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," Paramount; "Midsummer Night's Dream," Warner Brothers; "Mutiny on the Bounty," M-G-M; "Naughty Marietta," M-G-M; "Ruggles of Red Gap," Paramount, and "Top Hat," RKO-Radio.

Directors Also Named.

Three directors were nominated for the award of merit: John Ford, for "The Informer;" Henry Hathaway, for "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," and Frank Lloyd, for "Mutiny on the Bounty."

Gable, Laughton and Tone were nominated for their work in "Mutiny on the Bounty," the first time in the history of the academy that one picture has placed three actors in nomination. McLaglen was nominated for his work in "The Informer."

The actresses were nominated as follows: Miss Bergner, "Escape Me Never," an English made picture; Miss Colbert, "Private Worlds," Walter Wagner-Paramount Studios; Miss Davis, "Dangerous," Warner Brothers; Miss Hepburn, "Alice Adams;" Miss Hopkins, "Becky Sharp," Pioneer-RKO-Radio, and Miss Oberon, "The Dark Angel," Samuel Goldwyn.

Will Get Statuettes.

Winners will receive the medal statuette which has symbolized the academy awards since their inauguration.

Miss Colbert and Gable won the merit awards for performance last year in the picture "It Happened One Night."

The picture also won the production award, and its director, Frank Capra, was acclaimed the best director of that year.

The final curtain will ring down tomorrow night on the premiere engagement of Morgan Baker's much-discussed drama of job-juggling and other aspects of the American political scene, "Benevolent Blackmail," at the Wardman Park Theater.

At that final performance Jane Duenner, well-known Washington actress, will take the place of Ann Ives, in the role of Miss Jones, efficient secretary to the crusading Congressman (William E. Bryant), a replacement caused by Miss Ives' radio engagement.

This evening's performance is being sponsored by the Sick Benefit Association of the American Federation of Government Employes as a benefit for its hospital fund.

Still available are a few choice seats for these closing performances. Tickets may be obtained at the T. Arthur Smith Bureau, the Homer L. Kitt Co., the Willard Hotel, the Wardman Park Hotel, and at the theater box office.

Ricardo Cortez, booked for a week of personal appearances on the stage of the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater, will arrive in the National Capital at 10:45 this morning by Pennsylvania train from Boston. It is expected that a large number of screen fans will be on hand to welcome him to our midst.

Confidential Advice Note.

This is an event that you really should not midst, in a manner of speaking!

So We Go in for New Styles

A new portrait study of Margaret Sullavan with the circular effect obtained by spreading her arms in a tricky gown. Miss Sullavan occupies the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater, for the week beginning today, in a new thing by Universal called "Next Time We Love." It is based on an Ursulla Parrott novel.

Play by O'Neill Peak of Second Tourney Series

Illness in Cast Causes Delay of One Play Till Saturday.

The second leg on the 1936 one-act play tournament, conducted by the Community Center Department, was completed last night at Roosevelt High School with the offering of three more entries, Lord Dunsany's "The Queen's Enemies," Roy Cooper McGrue's "The Same Old Thing" and Eugene O'Neill's "The Dreamy Kid."

The Wesley Heights Players were scheduled to offer Loretta C. Bailey's "Job's Kinfolks," but illness in the cast caused a postponement until Saturday, when this and the allotted four will be presented.

"Same Old Thing."

Opening the evening's proceedings were the Washington Players, under the direction of Howard Whitfield, in the Dunsany play of ancient Egypt, wherein Yerby Pannill, as the queen, deftly drowns her enemies and their servants by letting the Nile flow into an Aidan temple. The enemies were played by J. Edmund Veitch, Herman P. Riess, Thomas M. Cahill, Harry Crow and Kent Dyer, with Margery Beall, Paul Murphy, Hugh C. Smith, R. T. Allen, J. Gordon Dahlem, Robert Reynolds, Ted Fretter, Joseph C. Fought and Harry Bluttstein others in the creditable company.

In "The Same Old Thing"—a rehearsal publicly performed, with the author suddenly appearing from the audience—the Players Club of Central Community Center, directed by Lucy Ann Rogers, failed to hit the proper stride for actors imitating actors, with the result that here again in the tournament comedy had proved the downfall of aspiring competitors.

Alice Louise Hunter played the lead, with Eleanor Boyd, Bob Morey (vice Jack Aracey), Terry McPhearson and William Austin Davis comprising the remainder of the cast.

Ely's Work Praised.

The second O'Neill opus of the tournament, "The Dreamy Kid," took the evening's top honors. A stark study of a colored boy who returns to his dying grandmammy even at the risk of being arrested for a murder he committed, the play presented O'Neill in an earlier and less morbid mood, and the Little Theater of Alexandria came through with a tensely stirring production.

Richard Ely, in the title role, was superb, offering a virile delineation which not only dominated that play, but one which, in memory, casts a pall over the other entries. Josephine Orendorff, as the Kid's consort, was everything which could be desired.

The grandmammy, played by Olga Crandall Burch, and the friendly neighbor, played by Ethel Jane Bunting, were the complementary roles, finely accentuating the sterner aspects of the Kid's return. Ruth Perrott deserves especial mention for her excellent direction.

The third preliminary contest—with Wigs and Queues Dramatic Club in "When the Sun Rises," the Calvary Players in "The Singapore Spider," the Capitol Players in the original "The Little Open Gate," the Bartfield Players in "Sintram of Skagerrak," the Wesley Heights Players in "Job's Kinfolks"—will be held Saturday evening. The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker.

TODAY will be the finale of the North American Wildlife Conference in session here since Monday. As usual Government wildlife specialists will take a leading part in the program. This morning, at the connecting wing auditorium, the speakers will include Hon. A. Willis Robertson, chairman of the House Special Committee on Wildlife Conservation; Frank T. Bell, Commissioner of Fisheries; Ira N. Gabrielson, chief of the Biological Survey.

BAKER.

At the Mayflower, where the special groups are convening, W. L. McAtee, J. C. Salyer and W. F. Kubichek, Biological Survey, will take part in a discussion of "Practical Wildlife Management." Four other Government men will participate in a forum on "Fur Resources Management:" Frank G. Ashbrook, Biological Survey; Ward C. Bower, Bureau of Fisheries; C. E. Rachford, Forest Service, and E. G. Holt, Soil Conservation Service. Various phases of "The Problem of Vanishing Species" will engage the attention of Dr. T. S. Palmer, Smithsonian; Joseph S. Dixon, Ben Thompson, and George Bagley, National Park Service, and Dr. Walter P. Taylor, Biological Survey.

Gustav Peck and James P. Davis, both of New York, have been confirmed by the Senate as members of the Prison Industries Reorganization Board.

John D. Creeca (F), and Stephen M. Phillips (P), both of Navy, are the inventors of a breather valve for tanks. The valve allows the escape or entry of air when filling or draining tanks, but does not permit the entry of water or mist.

Mrs. Waterbury Honored.

Today being the birthda anniversary of Mrs. Gladys M. Waterbury (F), Business Advisory Council, Commerce, we take the opportunity to join her host of friends throughout the Government in admiring her notable Federal career. Mrs. Waterbury is secretary to the executive secretary of the council.

She has held important positions at Government Printing Office, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, State Department, and in the office of the Secretary of Commerce.

Skolsky In Hollywood

Movie Boners.

Hollywood, Feb. 8.

Joan Crawford says that she is tired of reading about movie boners in her flickers, that she found a boner in another picture, and she'd like to become a member of the club. Miss Crawford tells of a boner in "Rose Marie," which was directed by W. S. Van Dyke, who directed her last picture.

In the scene in the Canadian hotel, claims Joan Crawford, Nelson Eddy wakes up the huge proprietor of the hotel and they rush toward Jeanette MacDonald's room. When the hotel owner, played by Richard Grieg, starts for the room, he is wearing a nightgown of a solid color with a stripe around the bottom. After Grieg enters Miss MacDonald's room, he is wearing a different nightgown, it is candy striped.

Joan Crawford is now a member of the Movie Boners' Club. Other stars can become members. The club isn't exclusive, and doesn't bar performers.

• • • •

In a scene of the flicker, "Anything Goes," writes Irving Balzer, Grace Bradley jumps on an automobile. It has been raining and, of course, the auto is wet. However, Miss Bradley is perfectly dry when she gets in the car. Grace Bradley, it appears, is the person who finally learned how to run between the raindrops and not get wet.

Can you explain why in the picture, "Glamour," asks J. Wilson, the chef in the cafeteria sequence holds his thumb on the flapjacks? Then Mr. Wilson tried to answer his own question, for he writes: Is it because he is afraid they will jump off the plate, or is it being done in the best restaurants?

• • • •

A popular movie boner, which occurs in practically every flicker showing a plane landing in Newark, is in "Ceiling Zero," and many have written in about it. When the plane lands at what is supposed to be Newark, mountains are seen in the background, and every one knows that there aren't any mountains near Newark. However, the scenes are filmed at the local airports here, and it is impossible to remove the mountains, which are actually standing there.

In the flicker, "Miss Pacific Fleet," Hugh Herbert makes several telephone calls. During one scene, writes Lawrence Schwartz, Herbert dials four times and gets his party. It is a fact that six or seven turns of the dial are required to get a number. But maybe they liked Hugh Herbert, too.

• • • •

Eddie Cantor's flicker, "Strike Me Pink," features a hot dance routine with Rita Rio supplying the heat, and the routine, insists Al Hulse. Besides being a clever singer and dancer, Rita Rio is also an excellent quick-change artist. In the first part of her dance routine, she wears shoes without straps; but at the end of the number, Rita is wearing shoes with straps.

"I guess they believe no one would be looking at Rita Rio's feet," says Mr. Hulse. "But I fooled them, didn't I?"

• • • •

Jean Parker in "The Ghost Goes West," returns to the castle to sleep there for the night, and, claims Edward Katz, Miss Parker is wearing a white evening gown. When Miss Parker comes downstairs the next morning, she is wearing a shirt and a polka dot blouse, which is a good trick for a gal who didn't bring a wardrobe with her.

It takes a man in the trade to notice a flicker flaw concerning his occupation in a picture. In "Show Them No Mercy," Arthur Mead, who writes that he is a patrolman, says that when the kidnaper chases the dog who is running away with the money, and then shoots the dog, he uses a Colt's 45-caliber Government model automatic pistol. Later in a sequence, the veterinary tells the G-Man that the dog was shot with a 38-caliber revolver bullet.

• • • •

Herbert Marshall in the flicker, "If You Could Only Cook," is kidnaped by gangsters from a wedding and taken directly to Jean Arthur, whom the gangsters are going to force him to marry right then and there. A little thing like a marriage license, says Arthur Murray, evidently isn't necessary in the movies.

Olympics Open With U. S. Hockey Victory Over Germany, 1-0

2 Stars Blacklisted, British Threaten to Withdraw Ice Team

Ired at Protest of Canada Against Pair of Players Recruited From Dominion; 80,000 Attend Opening.

By the Associated Press.

GARMISCH-PARTENKIRCHEN, Germany, Feb. 6.—Hockey warriors of the United States and Canada, co-favorites in advance calculations, whipped the weather man as well as their initial rivals today as the fourth winter Olympic opened to the accompaniment of a blaze of ceremony, swirling blizzard of snow and bitter renewal of eligibility arguments.

Featured in an opening day's competitive program devoted exclusively to hockey, the United States met with formidable opposition from Germany, paced by the Jewish center, Rudi Ball, but finally emerged across, 1 to 0, after a nip-and-tuck struggle.

Meanwhile Canada, the defending Olympic champion, pushed over five goals in the first period and crushed Poland under an 8-to-1 score in the other major attraction.

Weather Outrageous.

Both games—as well as those in which Hungary overwhelmed Belgium, 11 to 2, and Sweden nosed out Japan, 2 to 0—were played under outrageous weather conditions. So thick was the snowfall that play frequently had to be stopped so that the ice could be cleared. At times spectators barely could see across the rink.

Overshadowing competitive developments tonight, however, was the British team's threat to withdraw from hockey competition as a result of the blacklisting of two of its players, James Foster and Alex Archer, both former Winnipeg stars from Canada.

Greatly incensed over the action of their Canadian cousins in precipitating the dispute that led to the suspension of Foster and Archer by the International Ice Hockey Federation, the British promised they would make a final decision tomorrow at 3:15 p. m., just before they are scheduled to make their hockey debut against Sweden.

Claim Rule Violation.

Canada led the fight that resulted in the suspensions and the virtual wrecking of British championship chances, charging Foster and Archer had violated the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association rule requiring players transferring to other countries to first obtain permission of the C. A. H. A.

A spokesman for the British team declared the application by the Canadians of their local rule wasn't "playing the international game."

Avery Brundage, president of the American Olympic committee, who took a prominent part in last night's meeting when the two British players were found ineligible, said he couldn't believe the British team would take any such summary action as to withdraw.

"I hope they won't do anything hasty," Brundage said, "because I've always considered their standards of sportsmanship among the highest in the world."

"Linen Laundered."

The Associated Press learned authoritatively that the British wouldn't have been half so indignant had the protesting nation been other than one of Britain's dominions. They feel the Canadians might well have avoided laundering the empire's linen in public.

Outside of that one disturbing factor, Brundage could only wax enthusiastic about the games so far.

"Today's ceremony was by far the grandest we've had at any of the winter games," he declared. "The winter Olympics are growing up. Very soon they'll rival the summer games in importance. Their rapid development is one of the finest things in sport today."

Despite the terrific storm, fully 80,000 spectators poured into this picturesque resort for the opening ceremonies, with Chancellor Hitler speaking the short formula that officially launched the games.

Brundage, in expressing his complete satisfaction with every phase of the games, emphasized he had seen no evidence of any discrimination against Jewish athletes or Jewish citizens since his arrival in Germany.

Many Mishaps May Cancel Sled Races

2 More Accidents Occur; Americans to Wait on Repairs.

By the Associated Press.

GARMSCH-PARTENKIRCHEN, Germany, Feb. 6. — Fears that the Olympic bobsled competition would have to be postponed or canceled altogether were expressed today when the run already the scene of several minor accidents, took a heavier practice toll among the big four-man sleds.

Only six sleds made the descent before the run was closed, but two of them cracked up, injuring a Rumanian and two Dutch pilots. The accidents occurred at the famous Bavarian curve, a hairpin turn that compares with the three main curves on the Mount Van Hoevenberg run at Lake Placid, scene of several bad spills in the 1932 games.

Suffers Broken Ankle.

Hendrik Bulten, of Holland, suffered a broken ankle bone, and Piet Metzelaar, also of Holland, and Alexandru Papana, of Rumania, received lesser leg injuries. Several minor injuries were reported yesterday among the two-man bobsledders.

Before the run was shut down, Donna Fox, New York undertaker, piloted one of the American sleds down the course in the fine time of 1:46. Riding with Fox were Max Bly, of Lake George, N. Y.; Richard Lawrence, of Branchville, N. J., and James Bickford, of Lake Placid.

Fatality Is Averted.

After the mishap to the Dutch sled, which occurred when the driver took the curve too late and lost control, the American team said it would attempt no more runs until the course had been repaired. Experts said if the Rumanians had been using a wheel-steered sled, the mishap might easily have proved fatal.

Both J. Hubert Stevens, leader of the American team, and Samuel Dunlop, of the Dutch team, told the Associated Press the Bavarian curve was incorrectly built. They pointed out that sleds were unable to reach the proper height due to the curve's abruptness.

"The curve is structurally unsound," declared Stevens. "If six sleds tore it to pieces today, how can 60 sleds be expected to ride it during the two-day competition?"

Cards Sign Gelbert.

St. Louis, Feb. 6 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinals today received the signed contract of Charley Gelbert. The third baseman, who starred last year after recovering from a hunting injury in 1933, was the thirteenth player to enter the Redbird fold.

Pipgras Retires; To Be An Umpire

By the Associated Press.

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 6.—George Pipgras, former major league pitcher, today announced his retirement from the playing ranks to become an umpire in the New York-Pennsylvania League this year.

Pipgras, who pitched for the New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox for ten years, had a perfect world series record, winning a game for New York in each of three series, in 1927, 1928 and 1932.

Pipgras enjoyed his most successful season in the majors in 1928 when he won 24 games and lost 13.

YVON ROBERT, the 21-year-old handsome Montreal muscleman, required just 23 minutes to slam Sure Mike Mazurki into submission last night at Turner's tussle temple. Nearly 2,500 entertainment seekers turned out for the exhibition.

The match, alleged feature of an equally alleged all-star card, was distinctive in that it failed to inspire the huge crowd either to boos, catcalls, huzzahs or anything else.

Robert pitched in like a hungry rabbit in a cabbage patch, so enthusiastically did he squirm about the mat. But it was all for naught because the garrulous Italian simply refused to be alarmed.

Tries a Leglock.

The Canadian's next offering was an innocuous-looking leglock, which Mazurki suffered through with all the finesse of a tried and true journeyman. Mazurki stalled like a champion, and Robert worked feverishly.

Obviously realizing he wasn't making a conspicuous hit with the customers, Yvon dragged out and dusted off his famous Carpet Beater. It seemed to consist of a simple scissors, supplemented by much rolling about. But, alas, the famous Carpet Beater proved to be about as effective as a burned match.

Bash Each Other.

The 20-minute mark found Mazurki bashing Robert all over the rostrum. This, of course, was very embarrassing for Monsieur Robert. So he bashed back. Mazurki was stunned by this turn of events and presently got tied up in a decisive series of body slams.

Johnson, of A's, Spurns 2d Offer

Tacoma, Wash., Feb. 6 (AP).—Bob Johnson, slugging outfielder for the Philadelphia Athletics, today returned unsigned the second contract offered him by the club this season.

The outfielder, who batted .330 and hit 28 home runs last year, has announced he is holding out for a $12,000 contract.

The two offered him thus far were understood to be about $3,000 under that figure.

Golf Invaders Ired by 'Cool' Reception

By the Associated Press.

LONG BEACH, Calif., Feb. 6.—The International Lakes Cup Golf Trophy was a trifle tarnished with disappointment today—and misunderstanding.

Silver symbol of friendly rivalry between Australia and United States golfers, it rested in the possession of a picked team of American professionals.

Crushed in the trophy play after an unsuccessful round of California tournaments, the Australian six-man team expressed disappointment over the welcome accorded them.

They came to spend three or four months, expecting to tour the country in match play exhibitions with America's best under the auspices of the Professional Golfers' Association.

Instead, they stayed only to participate—and not very successfully—in the California tournaments and the trophy match. There the "welcome" ended.

"Our welcome was so opposite to what we had been led to expect that our men were all for taking the first boat back," said Harold Campbell, honorary captain of the visitors.

Horton Smith, tournament chairman of the P. G. A., epressing apologies, said, "The whole trouble can be laid to misunderstanding."

"As I see it," Smith said, "the Australian P. G. A. took a suggestion by Paul Runyan to send a team to the United States as an official invitation for such a tour.

"Officially, the P. G. A. did not extend an invitation for an American tour this year."

Virginia Bows To Md. Rally, 40 to 34

Terps, Trailing at Half by 18-14, Come Back to Trim Cavaliers.

BRANDISHING a potent scoring cudgel late in the final period after getting off to a slow start, the University of Maryland courtmen came from behind to gain a 40-to-34 decision over Virginia last night in another wild session of basketball.

A throng of 2,500 fans saw the methodical Cavaliers succumb to their host's eleventh-hour uprising that snatched a victory from the brink of defeat. The Virginians were handicapped by the absence of Bud Abbitt, regular center, who was called home because of his father's serious illness, but they would have needed more than Abbitt to stem the tide in those last few minutes of play.

Wheeler Hero.

Bernie Buscher topped the Terrapin scoring attack with 11 points, but it was Waverly Wheeler, sophomore forward, who swung the pendulum of victory toward his mates with a field goal and subsequent foul in the last minute of play, when Virginia threatened to tie the score at 35-all.

Two field goals by Smith brought the Cavaliers within arm's length of their rivals with 2½ minutes left to play and Virginia's dormant attack suddenly coming back. Then it was that Wheeler plucked a ball from out of a tangle of arms and legs under his own backboard and, chucking it with one hand as he fell, sank another basket for Maryland. He was fouled in the act and made good on his charity throw. Those three points definitely sealed Virginia's fate.

4,000 to See N. Y. U. Face Hoyas

By Lewis F. Atchison.

THE most powerful basketball team in the Nation, personified by New York University, and one not quite so strong, as portrayed by Georgetown University, will meet tonight at 8:30 o'clock at Tech High School to determine whether the Hoyas shall take another biff on their collective chin, or whether they are destined to interrupt the triumphant march of the virile Violets.

Conquerers of every conference champion in the country of any import, Pacific Coast included, New York arrives in town boasting an unblemished record of 12 consecutive victories, another record of 46 wins in its last 47 games, the smoothest passing team developed in Gotham since the original New York Celtics catapulted to fame, and a burning ambition to finish the current season undefeated.

Sell-Out Looms.

A capacity attendance of 4,000 fans, including the Naval Academy basketball squad, is expected to jam every nook and cranny of Tech's gym for the game. District fire regulations prohibit the sale of more than 4,000 tickets, and when this mark is reached the doors will be closed. All tickets will be dispensed on a first-come-first-served basis.

Booted from one end of the Eastern Conference to the other by more experienced rivals, Georgetown, nevertheless, remains a distinct threat to the continuation of New York's amazing record. A thrilling overtime game with Temple, lost in the last second of play; an equally thrilling victory over Pitt in another overtime fracas, stamp the Hoyas as formidable opposition for even New York University.

A predominently sophomore quintet that can be fired to fanatical zeal on occasion, Georgetown will enter the fray grimly determined to be the first to stop its highly-touted opponent's winning streak. If Fred Mesmer's boys can play 40 minutes of the basketball they have exhibited at 20-minute stretches in the past, New York is headed for the greatest shock of its campaign.

N. Y. U. Five at Peak.

But New York fans and players alike have an unbounded confidence in the ability of Capt. Bill Rubenstein, Len Maidman, Irwin Klein, Milt Schulman and others on the 19-man squad of the invaders and feel that the District dribblers will be a small and easy hurdle for them. The Violet's thrilling 28-23 victory over St. John's of Brooklyn, one of its strongest foes, Wednesday night, placed it on edge for tonight's game and the visitors should be in top stride.

Mesmer intends to use the same starting line-up that has opened against all previous opponents in home games. Mike Petroskey will jump center, with Harry Bassin and Don Gibeau at forward; Capt. Ben Zola and Tommy Nolan, guards. But Buddy Nau, Tom Keating and Johnny Frank, all of whom have served well in reserve roles in the past, will be ready, with a corps of others, to step into the breach should any of these falter.

New York's line-up has yet to be announced, but Rubenstein is certain to start at guard, with Schulman a possible running mate. Maidman and Klein probably will draw the forward assignments with Terjesen at center.

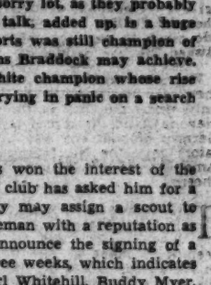
This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

JACK SHARKEY'S return to the prize ring up in Boston tonight finds this department keyed to a high pitch of indifference, but with Florida beckoning and pieces for the paper coming tough these days, I am constrained to take him as a topic.



POVICH.

Speaking of taking Sharkey, Primo Carnera took him in eight rounds for the championship three years ago, and since that evening he has been taken with great regularity. Tommy Loughran, a guy he knocked out in two rounds five years ago, took him by a decision in a Philadelphia bout—and King Levinsky took him in the same manner in Chicago. If Sharkey's a "white hope" at this age and date, why, fetch me my brown shirt, because I'm a Hitler Storm Trooper.

He's fighting Tony Shucco tonight, which is another way of saying that the salmon business in Boston is bad these days. Sharkey owns the longest bar in Boston but the money isn't flowing in like it used to, apparently. Because that's the only reason Sharkey would return to the ring. He never had any great yen for fighting even when he was specializing in the business.

Sharkey won the world's championship in the second bout with Max Schmeling with the help of the rawest decision ever handed down in a heavyweight title affair. That was the evening that Schmeling boxed his ears off and thumped him solidly for 12 of the 15 rounds only to hear with unbelieving ears that Sharkey was awarded the decision.

THE greatest fight he ever fought was the Harry Wills affair, and that was no great shucks of a battle. But anybody who beat, nay, even met Harry Wills at that time was bound to be something of a hero. Wills was the black menace of the world, still dogging Jack Dempsey's trail after challenging Dempsey unsuccessfully for five years, and the folks who shudder at the thought of black supremacy in the prize ring were deeply obligated to Sharkey.

In recent statements, Sharkey has made a point of his success over Wills with the statement that "these Negroes were always setups for me," aiming, apparently, at a bout with Joe Louis and the financial emoluments that kind of a match would necessarily bring him. But he neglected to say that Wills, when he beat him, was a slow, doddering, washed-up fellow who had wasted the years of his prime in an unsuccessful effort to get Jack Dempsey into the same ring.

Beaten successively by Carnera, Loughran and Levinsky and in retirement for two years, Sharkey would last with Joe Louis about as long as it would require Louis to throw his Sunday punch. Anybody who permitted himself to be knocked out by Primo Carnera, as Sharkey did, should not be mentioned in the same inhalation with Louis, to say nothing of getting into the same ring with him.

If Sharkey, indeed, represents the Nation's No. 1 White Hope, as he fancies he does, then our White Hopes are a sorry lot, as they probably are, indeed. Anyway, all this "white hope" talk, added up, is a huge insult to Jimmy Braddock, who, at last reports was still champion of the world. No matter what other distinctions Braddock may achieve, he will be remembered best as the only white champion whose rise to the title sent the professional Nordics scurrying in panic on a search for a White Hope.

In Short—

Harry Bassin, Georgetown sophomore, has won the interest of the Detroit Tigers' scouting staff . . . the Detroit club has asked him for a copy of the Georgetown schedule, that they may assign a scout to watch him play . . . Bassin is a big first baseman with a reputation as a slugger . . . Clark Griffith has failed to announce the signing of a single Washington player during the past three weeks, which indicates that he is having difficulty with such as Earl Whitehill, Buddy Myer, Joe Kuhel, Buck Newsom and Johnny Stone . . . Guess what Fred Schulte said when notified he had been traded to the Pirates! . . . I have always wanted to play for Pie Traynor and Pittsburgh has always been my favorite city." . . . When young Joe Di Maggio demanded a contract for $8,000 with the Yankees, he was turning down an offer of $6,400 . . . which is about $1,400 more than rookies usually draw in their first season in the big leagues . . . Col. Jake Ruppert is adding 10,000 seats to Yankee Stadium, despite the fact that the Yanks failed to fill the stadium on a single day during the 1935 season.

Sharkey Faces Test in Shucco Tonight; Pins Hopes on a K. O.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Feb. 6.—Former heavyweight champion Jack Sharkey, who has not been under 200 pounds since his fistic heyday, weighed 198 today when he completed training for the second move in his comeback campaign, a ten-round bout with the clever Tony Shucco tomorrow.

The former titlist, whose initial comeback start against Ed (Unknown) Winston left a sour taste in the mouth of the boxing public two months ago, accepted a real task when he signed for Shucco a Boston rival who boasts several decision over champions, including one over Jimmy Braddock, the current heavyweight ruler.

Pins Hopes on K. O.

Sharkey has been boxing for the last three weeks and considers himself in excellent fettle. His 33-year-old legs, however, do not appear supple enough to hold him up for ten rounds against an opponent of Shucco's caliber, and he has pinned all of his victory hopes on a speedy knockout.

Shucco, now scaling 183, is a highly skilled boxer with nothing resembling a wallop. He plans a cautious battle, and if he is permitted to set th epace the expected crowd of 15,000 at the Boston Garden probably will witness a very tame exhibition.

College Matmen Vie.

Two old wrestling rivals will try their half-Nelsons and arm-locks on one another this afternoon, when Maryland invades Kendall Green for a match with Gallaudet. Tom Clayton, Old Line coach, directed the Blues last year and enjoyed a successful season.

French Athletes Salute Hitler, Win Roars of Crowd.

By Paul Gallico.
Special Wireless to The Post.

GARMISCH-PARTENKIRSCHEN, Germany, Feb. 6.—The Olympic fire burns again after four years. This time is it high up on the slope of Mount Gudsberg. There, next to the ski jumps, the fire of youth bursts forth. The steal Olympic tower was draped with five circles of flags.

As Chancellor Adolph Hitler, wearing a brown leather coat, white collar and a brown tie, pronounced the simple words opening the fourth Olympic winter games, field guns cracked up on the hills and a band played the Olympic hymn. One thousand and sixty-one athletes stood at attention behind their flags, half hidden by a furious blizzard which roared down the valley from the Alps.

It was a splendid picture, with all the youngsters in ski, skating, hockey and bob costumes, dark blues and whites predominating. Only the Americans were badly dressed in lackey coats and motormen's caps.

THIRTY-FIVE THOUSAND persons were in the snow-covered stands when promptly at 11 o'clock two Greek skiers led the parade of nations into the gigantic horseshoe ski stadium past Hitler. The reviewing balcony was packed with German "big shots," including Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, propaganda minister; Gen. Ritter von Epp, Bavarian statthalter, and foreign diplomats. Black uniformed, steel helmeted schutzstaffel acted as Hitler's bodyguard.

The newspapermen made a book on who would give Hitler a salute in passing the stand. There was a startling surprise when France passed, with arms raised, the crowd roaring its approval of the courtesy. But the biggest surprise came when Austria, 117 strong, many in national Tyroler costume, gave the Nazi salute. This caused the crowd to give a tremendous ovation. Hitler beamed, feeling this courtesy may do much to ease the tension between the two nations.

When the Americans marched by there was no flag dip and no salute; only eyes right they passed the reviewing stand. As agreed last night, German officials and also the spectators gave the Nazi salute to the American flag, but there were no cheers.

THERE was some confusion as to what salute who was giving whom. The angle of the arm seemed to make all the difference in the world. The arm straight out, that is the Olympic salute; the arm slightly raised is the Nazi salute and raised still more it is the Fascist salute. The arm raised still higher means "Teacher, may I leave the room?"

The blizzard broke early, with terrific precipitation. By the time the opening ceremonies began the mountain was hidden and everything mantled with snow, even Hitler's mustache and eyebrows were framed with white. It was a magnificent, thrilling spectacle as the colors of the nations came out of the white storm. The flags were wind-whipped and the pretty faces of the girl athletes were pink and their snow-flecked eyes sparkling. The American girl ski team looked like a beauty chorus, as did Audrey Peppe, the New York skater, and the Weigel sisters of Buffalo, Estelle and Louise.

Your correspondent fought down a lump in his throat, remembering the beauty of the Los Angeles Olympics opening. This one was touching, too, with its winter setting.

It would shame New York concessionaries that the hot dogs sold in the ski stadium here are 8 inches long and 1 inch thick. Cognac is also peddled.

EACH nation entering the stadium was greeted by gun fire. Roje Monsen carried the American flag. All nations gave the Olympic salute during the oath taking.

In the first Olympic hockey game this afternoon, America beat Germany, 1 to 0, on a neat goal by Gordon Smith, of Boston, first line forward, after 14 minutes of play. Before the game was finished the play ring was covered with snow. The puck vanished beneath the snow, looking like a mole burrowing. Half the game was spent in just banging the puck up the rink stalling.

In the second game of the day, Canada routed the Polish team, 8 to 1. Poland's only goal was scored when the Canadian goalie accidentally shot the puck into his own net.

Terps Rated As Probable Favorites

Catholic U. Tapers Off for West. Md. Clash Tomororw Night.

UNDAUNTED by the jinx that dogged their footsteps through their first three matches, the University of Maryland's boxers return to the ring wars tonight at Chapel Hill, where they meet up with a squad of sharp-shooting ksyo artists sporting the colors of North Carolina. It will be the Terps' second conference test of the year.

Meanwhile, Catholic University's leather pushers will occupy their time today with final preparations for tomorrow's match with Western Maryland, which happens to be the lone collegiate sports attraction booked for the District. Both Maryland and Catholic face tough assignments.

Maryland, on a basis of its performance against Virginia, probably will climb through the ropes a slight favorite over the Tarheels, although North Carolina ranks high on the list of potential conference champions. Coach Jack Harmony's efforts to find a suitable 165-pounder may find Blair Smith, reserve football end, donning the padded mitts for the first time this season to replace Harold Kelly. Otherwise the line-up will be the same as that which succumbed to Virginia last week.

Rated Even Match.

The Cardinals are rated no better than an even money shot against Western Maryland after the Terrors' performance against Navy last week in a match that ended in a 4-4 draw. It is doubtful if Nick Campofreda, the heavyweight who scored a 15-second knockout over his Middy opponent, will fight tomorrow, but his absence will not be noticed, not with Tom Pontecarvo, the regular heavyweight, ready to resume his regular position.

The heavyweight scrap undoubtedly will feature the match, inasmuch as Leo Katalinas, Catholic's sensational knockout artist, is clamoring for bigger and better opposition. He'll get it in Pontecarvo, a big fellow, who is fast and clever and throws a potential kayo punch with each wave of his ponderous paws.

Mount Rainier Downs Laurel High, 27 to 3

Displaying a strong defense, Mount Rainier High School defeated Laurel High yesterday in a Prince Georges County basketball series game, 27-3. The game was played at Laurel.

Tournament Team Is Brother Act

Three sets of brothers grace the line-up of the Twin Oaks Black Hawks, defending champions in the 145-pound division of the District A. A. U. basketball tournament which The Washington Post will sponsor, starting February 18 at Heurich's gym. Americans Win First Test in Olympics seventh position, entered just in front of Germany, which came last.

The silence was not considered especially significant. It was probable that the spectators were weary after the many bursts of applause for earlier arrivals. Besides, the American uniforms were less eye-catching than some of those worn by continentals. It also was probable that the political situation had something to do with the silence.

As each flag except the Stars and Stripes passed the balcony of honor it was dipped in salute, Hitler, facing the two Olympic ski jumps which tower 1,000 feet above Garmisch, replied with the stiff-armed Nazi salute.

The United States delegation was among those which refrained from actual salute, but greeted Hitler by turning faces toward him.

When all the contestants had taken their places, the 28 national flags were reassembled in a shallow arc on the stadium floor.

Then Dr. Karl Ritter von Halt president of the German organizing committee, asked Hitler, who remained bareheaded throughout, to proclaim the games opened.

Addressing the assembly from a pulpit in front of the grandstand and facing the balcony of honor, Dr. von Halt welcomed the athletes and expressed the hope that the games will "be a tournament of peace leading to better understanding between nations."

The Olympic fires, which will burn during the life of the winter games, burst into flame as Hitler's last word was uttered.

As the flames shot up from tall steel towers, the massed bands played the solemn Olympic hymn, accompanied by frequent salvos from the cannon.

Remain at Salute.

The entire crowd, looking like so many snow men, remained at salute until the final note was played. Then followed the massing of flags before the balcony of honor.

Willie Bogner, German down-hill ski entrant, stepped solemnly forward, and for the field of athletes, took the Olympic oath:

"We swear we will take part in the Olympic games in loyal competition, respecting the regulations which govern them and desirous of participating in them in the spirit of sportsmanship for the honor of our country and for the glory of sport."

Then started the exit. The athletes, in reverse order, filed out of the stadium, each group again passing Hitler. As the last team passed by, he went to the administration building, and a moment later departed by automobile, waving smilingly to the cheering crowd.

During the last part of the procession, the sun tried feebly to break through the clouds, but soon a new storm started.

Robert Triumphs In Rassle Match

Having taken his licking more or less reluctantly, Herr Koverly smashed a ringsider's spectacles, rubbed soap in Detton's face, tore Referee Bennah Bortnick's nice, clean shirt and was finally kept from self-destruction by a half dozen of Maj. Brown's minions.

It befell the hapless lot of Messrs. Ivan (the Terrible) Managoff and Leering Len Hall to work the usual 30-minute draw.

In the opener Referee Bortnick licked both Jim Coffield and Jack Hader, but thought it best to award the verdict to Coffield after 22 minutes of sonorous grunting.

Rallying Twice, Patty Berg Triumphs

By the Associated Press.

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Feb. 6.—After twice gaining and losing 2-hole leads, Patty Berg, 17-year-old Minneapolis favorite, rallied to defeat Sylvia Annenberg, New York, 2 up, in the quarter-finals of the Miami-Biltmore Women's Amateur Golf Tournament today.

The red-haired school girl, who eliminated Frances Owen, Jacksonville, 6 and 5, in the morning's second round, faces Mrs. Opal S. Hill, Kansas City, in tomorrow's semi-finals.

Mrs. Maureen Orcutt Crews, Miami, at one time holder of virtually every women's title except the National, is paired with Marion Miley, Lexington, Ky., in the other semifinal match.

Crushing Mrs. Joseph Bydolek, Buffalo, N. Y., 10 and 8, in the second round, Mrs. Hill captured her quarter-final match with Mrs. Marion Hurpie Lake, Plandone, Long Island, 4 and 3.

Mrs. Crews downed Jean Bauer, Providence, Long Island, last year's winner, 1 up, and trounced Miss Katheryn Hemphill, Columbia, S. C., 2 and 1, while Miss Miley was eliminating Lillian Zech, Chicago, 3 and 1, and Mrs. Leon Solomon, Memphis, Tenn., 3 and 2.

C. U. Trounces Elkins Five, 39 to 21

AN exchange of losing streaks was negotiated between Catholic University and Davis-Elkins College last night on the Brookland boards, with the Virginia visitors coming out on the short end of the deal, 39 to 21. The Cards brought their three-game losing streak to an abrupt close and extended the losses of Davis Elkins to two straight.

So impressive was the new upswing in C. U. basketball stock that the Cards found themselves at the close possessors of a more smashing triumph than George Washington had earned over the same team the previous night. The Colonials had stopped Davis Elkins, 40-28.

Zeke Brown, C. U.'s gyrating guard, zig-zagged all over the floor to roll up a new season individual scoring record for District colleges. The burly basketer bagged ten shots from the floor and one from the free shot line for 21 counters, two more than the season's record held by Hal Kiesel, G. W. center.

Armstrong to Risk First-Place Standing

Armstrong High will risk its first-place standing in the South Atlantic Basketball Conference today at 3:20 p. m. when it meets Dunbar, runner-up, in the Terrell gymnasium. The Armstrong cagers have lost only one game in six starts, that defeat being dealt them by Douglass High, of Baltimore, joint holder of ranking position.

Colored Battlers To Fight Tonight

The first venture of a new colored promotorial team will be presented at Turner's Arena tonight when John Bell and Billy Edwards unveil a boxing show comprised of 32 sceduled rounds.

Giant heavyweights, in the persons of Lew Flowers, sparmate of Joe Louis, and Young George Godfrey, 220-pound Baltimorean, will participate in the main event slated to go ten rounds.

Lightweights will vie in an eight-round semifinal in which Meyer Rowan, a local favorite, will oppose Young Harry Wills, a Baltimore veteran.

Bowling

The pennant hopes of S. Kann's Sons were dealt a severe blow last night in the Department Store League at the Recreation drives, as they dropped two games to Hechts, while the first-place Woodward & Lothrop team was swamping Jelleffs. Palais Royal moved into the No. 3 hole with a clean sweep over Raleigh Haberdasher and Landsburgh's, chalking a three 581 games, downed Credit Bureau twice. Guy Curran blanked Youngs Shoes.

Chris Eckert gathered the maples to the tune of a 166 game and a new season record in the National Capital League last night at Lucky Strike and finished his set with 393.

Steward Brothers No. 1 team retained the leadership of the Takoma-Suburban League last night at the Takoma runways with two victories over Victor Flower Shop. The leaders established a new high total pinfall with 1,783. Ed Stevenson (Youngblood Hardware) shot a 160 game and 397 set to lead the individual efforts.

G. U. Freshmen Down Young Terrapins

IN a rough-and-tumble extra-period game, the Georgetown Freshmen defeated the Maryland Freshmen yesterday for the second time this season, 43 to 38, at Ritchie Coliseum. No less than 39 personal fouls were called by Referee Spencer Chase.

The score was tied at 37-37 at the end of the regular playing time, but Murphy, big Georgetown center, cut loose in the extra period to score three of Georgetown's extra five points. Murphy and Bizzette each sank a basket to start the extra period and Gay Edelin, former Eastern All-High star, dumped a foul shot for the forty-first point.

It was Maryland's second defeat in 11 starts this season.

Spears Often Ordered Rum Given Gridmen 'On the Sly,' Wisconsin Trainer Testifies

By the Associated Press.

MADISON, Wis., Feb. 6.—William (Billy) Fallon, University of Wisconsin trainer, told a committee of regents today that Head Coach Clarence W. Spears had instructed him on several occasions to give gridiron players liquor.

Fallon, testifying in the regents' investigation into Wisconsin's muddled athletic department situation, said Spears asked him to give players a coffee-liquor stimulant in 1932, when Minnesota met the Badgers at Madison. The trainer said that was the first time in his experience he had been asked to administer liquor to athletes.

The incident occurred during Spears' first year at Wisconsin, Fallon said he mixed a pint of brandy with a gallon of coffee.

Before last year's Northwestern game, Fallon said he went to Spears' office and was told by the football coach:

"Bill, don't give them orange juice and sugar between halves any more. Give them brandy and coffee, but don't let the fellow in the front office know about it."

Asked who was meant by the "front office," Fallon answered he assumed it meant Athletic Director Walter E. Meanwell.

Spears, who denied published reports he ordered whisky given players, was expected to testify later.

"Before the 1933 Minnesota game Spears came to me," Fallon said, "and asked me if I had any whisky. I said no, but told him I had some alcohol, about 8 ounces of it. He told me to put that in the coffee."

Fallon offered his testimony to the committee investigating university athletic troubles after refusing at first to discuss at an open hearing contents of an affidavit he filed with the regents recently.

He returned after consulting with an attorney and was told by Chairman Harold Wilkie that it would be a "good thing" if he made public what he knew.

Fallon said that five minutes before the Iowa game in 1933 he injected a local anesthetic into the broken finger of George Deanovich, an end, under "Spears' order."

Tony Popp, a fullback last year, was in the infirmary with two sprained ankles and a broken nose during practice one week, Fallon said, and quoted Spears as telling him:

"You get him (Popp) out of the hospital and get him out this afternoon."

Fallon testified a doctor at the infirmary told him Popp should not go out, but that he got him to the field on a promise he would bring him back that night.

In 1934, Harold Smith, a fullback, was in the infirmary, Fallon said, and Spears ordered him to "get Smith the hell out of there and get him out in a hurry."

Fallon was asked whether he thought it was improper to give a player a drug as in the instance of Deanovich.

"I don't think any man should be doped up any more than a race horse should be," Fallon answered. He added there was danger of an infection.

Jamboree Wins at Hialeah, Pays $9.20

Joe Wagner Guides Colt To Victory

By the Associated Press.

HIALEAH PARK, Fla., Feb. 6.—Jamboree, a coal-black son of Hightime, in the famous pink and black silks of Mrs. Payne Whitney's Greentree Stable, displayed marked improvement over his one previous local effort to lead home five other 3-year-olds in the featured fifth race of 1 mile here today.

Joe Wagner, riding his first winner since recuperating from an attack of pneumonia, had the colt well in hand as he flashed past the wire two lengths in the van to pay $9.20. The time was 1:37 3-5.

Brisk Whipping.

Wayne Wright, who leaves here tomorrow to ride A. A. Baroni's Top Row in the rich Santa Anita Handicap, was unable to make the gelding catch Jamboree despite a brisk whipping from the far turn home. Third money went to Mrs. F. P. Coltiletti's Sandy Boot, which was blocked on the far side. The three horses are eligible for the Florida Derby, as well as Mariato, which wound up last.

Zuni, coupled with Flag Cadet, cut out the pace to the top of the stretch. Jamboree and Dnieper, the latter on the outside, moved up around the final bend to dispute the issue in the stretch. Jamboree moved clear and Dnieper could not menace the lightly weighted Greentree colt.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROCKY PRINCE, $11.80, $4.80, $3.80; FOUR SPOT, $3.80, $3.50; HYMN, $5.40.

ROCKY PRINCE, favoring the grass course, assumed command midway of the backstretch, withstood stiff contention from FOUR SPOT in the last half mile and was under stout, urging until the close. FOUR SPOT carried JOHNS BIRTHDAY and FUSCO very wide at the first turn, went into contention steadily and held on gamely after making strong effort in the last half mile. HYMN went prominently and held on gamely for the final drive.

SECOND RACE—Three furlongs (chute). Purse, $800. For 2-year-old fillies. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:40. Off at 2:52. Winner, Mrs. W. A. Bridges' ch. f. (2), by Tail Timber—Naharanna. Trained by Mrs. A. Bridges. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:34 4-5.

TWO SOME	(Hunter)	112	4	7	7½	7½	40.85
BEACON QUEEN	(Sage)	112	2	5	5	8	47.40

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLDEY F., $3.30, $2.40, $2.40; CHANTING, $2.70, $2.80; REBECCA LEE, $4.70.

GOLDEY F., a rapid beginner, moved into a clear lead in the opening furlong, bore out until midway of the stretch run, then was straightened out and withstood CHANTING under a stout drive. CHANTING followed closest to the winner from the beginning, rallied strongly to punishment and was gaining fast nearing the close. REBECCA LEE bore toward the inside after the opening furlong, was hard ridden and held on with good energy to outlast MY ELSIE.

THIRD RACE—Seven furlongs (chute); claiming. Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds and upward, maidens. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:20. Off at 3:24. Winner, Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' dk. b. g. (3), by Sickle—Shumatt. Trained by H. Jacobs. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:24 4-5.

FRACTIOUS	(Rosen)	108½	2	9	5°	11	11	11	11	148.90

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SENATOR D., $3.70, $2.90, $2.40; BUZZIN' AROUND, $5.20, $3.60; TRAGEDIAN, $3.00.

SENATOR D. was sent to the front soon after the start, shook off MAPLE QUEEN after going five furlongs, opened up a winning lead when approaching the homestretch, but had to be kept under strong urging during the final drive to stall off BUZZIN' AROUND. Latter went forwardly placed, and came with excellent courage in the last three furlongs. TRAGEDIAN bettered his position steadily and was making up ground approaching the finish.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs; claiming. Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:53. Off at 3:56½. Winner, Mrs. John Hay Whitney's b. c. (6), by Black Toney—Friendly. Trained by J. W. Healy. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:11 4-5.

PHRIXUS	(Anderson)	102	11	5	8°	7°	10°	11	11	27.45

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CROWNING GLORY, $8.60, $4.50, $3.50; FOUNDER, $4.90, $4.10; FAKE, $3.80.

CROWNING GLORY, going in his best form, crowded his field when moving into the lead midway of the turn, opened up a clear lead midway of the homestretch, and came away steadily thereafter. FOUNDER improved his position gamely when obtaining racing room on the outside and closed with good energy. FAKE was rushed hard to gain the early lead, saved ground and held on well after being overtaken.

FIFTH RACE—One mile (chute). Pan American Airways. Purse, $1,200. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 4:25. Off at 4:25½. Winner, Greentree Stable's blk. c. (3), by High Time—Cherokee Rose. Trained by M. Gaver. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:37 3-5.

MARIATO	(Fallon)	95	5	4	4°	5°	6°	6	6	16.70

†B. Hernandez entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JAMBOREE, $9.20, $3.10, $2.70; DNIEPER, $2.70, $2.30; SANDY BOOT, $3.00.

JAMBOREE, nicely handled and kept within striking distance of the pacemaker, took command when reaching the homestretch, then was steadied along under mild pressure to withstand DNIEPER. Latter, permitted to drop out of contention soon after the start, tightened his way up on the outside to engage the leaders, but could not make up any ground under a hard drive at the close. SANDY BOOT saved ground while holding a forward position and held on with good courage when placed to a severe drive.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles (on turf); claiming. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:54. Off at 4:55½. Winner, David Garrity's b. g. (6), by Pilate—Flower Bud. Trained by P. B. Good. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:46 4-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight
BALIOS	(Meade)	102	8	2	2½	2½	2½	2½	1	$3.65

SURCOUF	(Kamar)	107	5	6	8°	9°	8°	8°	8	5.75

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BALIOS, $9.30, $5.70, $3.90; INFINITATE, $8.70, $4.70; RED ROAMER, $4.40.

BALIOS, hurried to the first turn and rated in close attendance of MOVE FASTER until approaching the final bend, took command and under a strong drive, drew clear when straightened into the homestretch, and was kept under pressure to the finish. INFINITATE, handling his weight nicely, followed close to the leaders, and held on strongly after better than his position. RED ROAMER, in the first flight from the beginning, came determinedly under a stout drive.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles; claiming. Purse, $800. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:24. Off at 5:26½. Winner, Willard Wilson's b. f. (4), by Pigeon Wing II—Goldie Girl. Trained by W. Crump. Value to winner, $625; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:50 4-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight
FIRST PIGEON	(Fallon)	102	3	1	1½	2°	3½	3°	1	$5.60
GRANDPAS BOY	(Jackson)	111	4	2	4½	4°	5°	4°	2	18.45

JAMES BOY	(S. Renick)	116	1	6	7°	7°	6°	6°	7	11.25

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FIRST PIGEON, $11.30, $6.50, $4.20; GRANDPAS BOY, $14.00, $8.80; WAR PLEDGE, $3.20.

FIRST PIGEON, intelligently handled, was eased back of the leaders after leading the way into the backstretch, moved to the outside when making her run and finishing strongly, outstayed GRANDPAS BOY after settling to the front inside the final furlong. GRANDPAS BOY, showing marked improvement, worked his way up on the outside and closed full of run. WAR PLEDGE had a lot taken out of him pressing FLOWERY LADY into defeat and he faltered in the closing furlong.

Hialeah Race Track, Feb. 6.

Dear Al:

There is not a track in the country where the ticket sellers' task is a more important one than at this tropical park. The man who presses the valves down to print the tickets for bettors must be on his toes every minute. He deals with a "floating" race crowd. Perhaps half of the customers are short-period vacationists, unfamiliar with the whys and wherefores of playing the mutuels. They seldom have the right change, they get in the "win" window instead of the "show," they are still undecided as to their horses when their turn comes to make the purchase, and they are continually asking for tickets by the name of the horse instead of the post position number which is used here. Add to these facts that the ticket sellers must be a general information bureau and you have some idea of their tedious job. And these fellows manage to work day after day with a smile for everyone. You can take this one or leave it, but one of the "sellers" told me that a woman approached his window the other day and asked if he could get a bet up for her on the fourth race at New Orleans. Must have been Mrs. Clocker Mike.

BILL.

First race—Foxiana, has trained impressively since her mile victory at Tropical Park. She had speed in that venture that should serve her well in this sprint. Dixie Princess had speed in her most recent trip postward, and appears to be the logical runner-up. Air Line has been overmatched lately and belongs with company of this caliber. Merovech deserves thought.

Second race—Anglo Saxon turned in a creditable third in his debut after suffering interference. With clear passage he should be right at hand. Jackie D., off his good fourth on Tuesday, rates serious thought. He can become a menace by a top effort. Overplay must be given a chance to improve by the education that he received in his first racing venture.

Third race— After being squeezed back early in her last race, Miss Bam came on to be a good third. At this increased distance she rates the call to earn brackets. Greek Idol has been racing with better than he is asked to meet here. His class gives him a chance despite the high impost. Balanced Budget off his last victory should be able to turn back the others, which should be led by John Tie.

Fourth race—Insulated had no chance from a poor start in that last race. He is fit and ready and the company is within the limitations of his best efforts. Bright Emerald must be given consideration on showing locally. A top effort will see this one close. Cinar is another company of this type. Cantakit missed a nose decision and gets a chance to stone.

Fifth race—Bar Nothing earned her first brackets so easily that she must be favored to repeat with this small band of her sex. Torita had trouble in her last racing venture, in which she finished fourth. With clear passage she can become a menace. Miss Trophy had speed in her last, and that race should serve to have her thoroughly tightened.

Sixth race—Dowdy Doll takes off 5 pounds from that creditable second. She should be the first home here if she runs true. Big Gawk can be expected to offer stern competition to our choice. That last second was a corking effort. Blessed Again should show to advantage with this company considered on the strength of that last good second.

Seventh race — Sparkdale was forced to race wide in that last race, in which he was a good fourth. He must be given another chance. Lativich closed full of run to be a close fourth in a sprint. This route should suit better. Judge Judy had trouble in that last race and can do better. Mae Skilling has worked well.

Best bet—Bar Nothing.

Chrysler Lifts Dividend 25c To $1 Per Share

1935 Net, $34,975,818, Exceeds Previous Peak in 1928.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 6.—Chrysler Corporation today increased its dividend to $1 a share from 75 cents paid in the previous quarter. The dividend is payable March 31 to stock of record March 2.

The corporation and its subsidiaries in 1935 earned $34,975,818, after charges, compared with 1934 earnings of $9,534,836. Last year's profits were equal to $8.07 a share compared with $2.19 in the previous year.

Net income for 1935 is the highest ever recorded by Chrysler and compares with the 1928 net of $30,991,795, the previous high point.

Directors did not indicate that the current $1 dividend places the stock on a $4 annual basis, merely announcing the new higher rate of payment. A similar attitude was taken in the previous quarter when the dividend was raised to 75 cents from the 25-cent regular and the 25-cent extra paid in the second and third quarters.

France Reduces Rate From 4 to 3½ Per Cent

Paris, Feb. 6 (AP).—The Bank of France today lowered its discount rate to 3½ per cent from 4 per cent. The reduction in the rate is the second in less than a month, it having been reduced from 5 per cent January 9.

The rate went to a high of 6 per cent last November to check the withdrawals of gold from the Bank of France. Last December 31, with withdrawals slackening, the rate was reduced to 5 per cent. At the present time, gold is being shipped from the United States to Europe.

Bank Clearings Gain 20.5% Over Last Year

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 6.—Bank clearings in the 22 principal cities reporting to Dun & Bradstreet for the week ended February 5 amounted to $5,912,328,000, compared with $4,905,008,000 last year, an increase of 20.5 per cent. In the previous week the gain was 3.0 per cent.

At New York City, clearings amounted to $4,033,340,000, or 22.2 per cent higher than the total reported for the same week in 1935. The aggregate for centers outside of New York City was $1,878,988,000, or 17.1 per cent above last year.

Clearings last week exceeded those for the previous week by $639,710,000, whereas for the two similar weeks a year ago a decrease of $214,077,000 was reported.

Gains were reported in all centers, with the exception of Cincinnati and Louisville. Substantial increases occured at a number of cities, including Chicago, where clearings totaled $274,600,000, an advance of 18.5 per cent over the $231,800,000 reported in the same week a year ago.

The Washington Clearing House reports total clearings of $18,739,894.07 for the week ended February 5, an increase of 14.71 per cent compared with the total of $16,336,692.03 for the week ended January 29. Compared with the total of $16,610,196.85 for the same period last year, clearings increased 12.82 per cent.

Food Index Unchanged.

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—The Dun & Bradstreet weekly food index remained unchanged this week at $2.67 or 12 cents below the peak recorded last December. The figure was $2.73 a year ago.

Steel Industry Plans to Spend $200,000,000

U. S. Steel Corp. Roads to Put $12,000,000 Into Equipment.

Del Monte, Calif., Feb. 6.—The steel industry will spend $200,000,000 for modernizing equipment and for new finishing capacity this year, Walter S. Tower, executive secretary of the American Iron and Steel Institute, said here today in an address before the California State Chamber of Commerce.

"The expected outlay this year compares with $140,000,000 in 1935," said Mr. Tower. "These expenditures will add little or nothing to the capacity of the industry to produce raw steel. Practically every dollar is being spent to improve methods of manufacture and to make a better product for the customer."

According to Mr. Tower, employment in the steel industry has reached a figure approximating the total number of employes in the years of peak activity in 1928 and 1929.

"Under these circumstances it seems clear that in its responsibility for giving employment to workers normally attached to it, the industry has made a genuine contribution to recovery," he said.

Large U. S. Steel Orders.

New York, Feb. 6.—Railroad subsidiaries of the U. S. Steel Corporation have placed orders for 24 locomotives. Of the total 15 went to the Baldwin Locomotive Works, 5 to the Lima Locomotive Works, Inc., and 4 to the American Locomotive Co. The engines are for the Bessemer & Lake Erie and the Union Railroad companies.

The two U. S. Steel railroads also have been in the market for 3,000 cars. Bessemer & Lake Erie is after 1,000 90-ton hoppers and 1,000 70-ton mill type gondolas, and the Union Railroad 1,000 70-ton gondolas.

Total cost of this new rolling equipment is estimated at somewhat in excess of $12,000,000. The locomotives should call for a little over $2,000,000, while the cars are likely to run somewhere around $10,000,000. This is the largest equipment business in a long time.

Listed Stock Value Highest in 5 Years

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—The total value of all shares listed on the Stock Exchange crossed the $50,000,000,000 mark as of February 1 to the highest level shown by the monthly compilation since April 1, 1931, the exchange announced today. The latest figure is $50,164,547,052.

The value of listed shares reached its lowest point in the figures as of July 1, 1932, at $15,633,479,577. They had sunk to that point from the September 1, 1929, peak of $89,668,270,854. A month ago the value was $48,945,581,555 and a year ago $32,991,035,003.

Stocks Move Ahead With Sharp Advance by Telephone Shares; Government Bonds Firm.

New York, Feb. 6.—In a turnover of less than 3,000,000 shares the stock market was quietly strong, closing prices being near the top for most of the active shares. Bonds pushed ahead. Commodities were mixed. May wheat dropped ⅝ of a cent to 99¼ cents a bushel. Cotton prices were higher. Foreign exchange was unusually dull with the dollar turning a firm face to sterling and the gold currencies.

Dealings in stocks cooled considerably in the afternoon trading, following a moderately active morning, and attention concentrated on a handful of trading favorites. Most of the acknowledged industrial and railroad leaders held their position, mainly because no selling attempt was made to dislodge them, but with the exception of American Telephone, which jumped half a dozen points, Consolidated Gas, Western Union and Westinghouse, they furnished no great inspiration to speculative activity. In some respects the market had a stronger investment flavor than it has had for the past few weeks. It was significant that the day brought a strong and active Government bond market.

The coal company section again was strong, with advances of as much as 2 points. Some profit taking took place in the motors, Chrysler maintained interest on dividend hopes. A thin market developed for buyers of Worthington Pump, the issues rising 3 to 5 points. Farm shares continued buoyant. In the rails a little diversion was furnished by Seaboard, long a neglected and disliked issue.

Credit Control.

The market again demonstrated the fact that it is possible to have a good demand for gilt-edged bonds along with lively trading for long account in common stocks. The Government bond market was firm, and the obvious explanation was that a number of recent steps taken at Washington have given courage to the capital market. Those steps include the siding of the Executive against highly inflationary means of paying the soldiers' bonus, willingness of the Treasury to allow gold to be shipped as a support for the dollar, cancellation of $1,000,000,000 in authorized but unused spending power for various departments of the Government, and action by the Treasury and the Federal Reserve Board designed to put brakes on a credit stampede.

The last mentioned consists of the Federal Reserve Board's recent increase in stock trading margin requirements, and the shifting by the Treasury of a half billion of its deposits with commercial banks to the Federal Reserve banks. The effect of that is, and was designed to be, to hold down the valume of excess bank reserves. No one is using the excess, but so long as it is there the cautious will fear an outbreak. It is after all a minor matter compared with the real seat of trouble—namely, the unbalanced budget—but be it the coming election or a real change of heart, or both, at the moment the Administration seems to be swinging well over toward a sounder fiscal policy.

As some observers see it, greater danger now lies with Congress than with the Executive, largely because Congress, fed so long on high and wide spending, is slower to perceive the danger signals. Meanwhile the prize for the day's contribution to financial silliness goes to Senator Patman, who sees in the recent gold exports a plot of high finance to thwart the inflationists in Congress. Senator Patman ought to be content to rest on the laurels he already has won and give some of his colleagues a chance.

Chance for Business.

That stocks can hold their strength and activity when even among the more or less professional speculating element so much doubt has arisen and so much prophecy of a wide retreat is heard, and when inflationary sentiment is being allowed to simmer down a bit, probably is because the season for greater industrial activity is opening up. The motor trade is by no means discouraged at the mild recession in January, and is planning for new impulse this spring. The steel industry is finding the outlook much brighter with universal agreement that railroad and building construction orders this year will be heavy. The railroads in particular are beginning to replace and repair their roadways and equipment, now that the rise in traffic has carried far enough to restore some measure of their credit.

Given more active business and no immediate heavy increase in the tax burden, the stock market does not need the much talked of dose of inflation to attract buyers. After all, stable commodity prices, stable currency, low interest rates and an absence of frills in Government finance make the best foundation for business and markets. It is a bull point on stocks as well as on bonds that the New Dealers admit the period of pump priming and emergency management is over, with or without the aid of the Supreme Court.

Brokers' Loans.

Brokers' loans in January, as reported by the stock exchange, fell nearly $14,000,000, while the market value of listed shares rose about 7 per cent, or $3,218,000,000. In ordinary times that would indicate the main stream of buying was still coming from investors with their own cash — investment trusts, wealthy individuals and foreign capitalists. Evidence from other sources indicates, nevertheless, that for some time the stock market has been moved by other than purely investment buying. Big and little operators have been at work and, especially within the last few weeks, according to brokers, the small public has been coming in. Pool work and active public speculation formerly were marked by a strong rise in brokers' loans, but now falling loans by no means deny their presence. Small traders have again accumulated a good deal of money of their own. The big ones have the cash, too, and they have means of borrowing outside their brokerage accounts.

Equipments.

A banker active in the railroad financing field says it has been years since he has heard of so many railroad equipment orders. Most of them will be financed with the usual equipment trust, and less aid will be asked from the RFC. The ordering of new equipment and supplies will grow as the credit of the railroads strengthens. Some of the railway equipment company stocks already have had pretty good advances, but some fruit probably remains on the trees. The railroad car, locomotive and supply makers have had to starve for years, and the natural reaction would be for their securities to overindulge when the food comes.

Capital Transit Expansion Cost Is $7,778,100

$5,061,000 Already Has Been Expended on Betterments.

Capital Transit Co. has spent $5,061,000 in improving the system since the merger of the old Capital Traction and Washington Railway & Electric companies on December 1, 1933, according to a statement issued yesterday by John H. Hanna, president. To complete the program of betterments, he said, $2,727,100 will be expended this year. The expenditures thus made public explain the large decreases in net earnings which recently have featured the monthly reports of the Capital Transit Co.

The largest item in the amount already spent for improvements is $2,067,000 for 227 modern buses. This year 35 more buses will be purchased for $259,600. The principal requirements this year will be $967,000 for rerouting tracks and $600,000 for the track renewal program.

Growth of System.

In November, 1933, the two old companies were operating with 487 street cars and 132 buses on the streets, a total of 639 vehicles. Capital Transit is now using 573 street cars and 335 buses each week-day, a total of 908 vehicles.

At the time the two companies were merged the average fare paid by street car and bus riders was 7.8 cents. With the use of the weekly pass it is now 6.03 cents.

In the first week of weekly pass sales (December 3, 1933) 29,000 were purchased by Washingtonians. Now pass sales in the District of Columbia are close to 80,000 a week and have exceeded that number.

Passes are used on the average, 30 times each week, as shown by careful counts. This means the owner of a $1 pass is riding for 3 1-3 cents a trip; the owner of a $1.25 pass for 4 cents.

Capital Transit has now 3,600 employes, about 2,100 are on the street cars and buses. Its payroll is over $5,500,000 a year, the largest in Washington outside the Government, both in number and amount, the company says.

Refinance Corporation.

At the annual meeting of stockholders of National Refinance Corporation yesterday, all the directors were re-elected. Lewis L. Clarke, of New York, was elected chairman; F. S. Dudley, of Washington, president; John R. Waller, executive vice president; Samuel C. Redman, treasurer, and W. M. Balderston, secretary.

Canadian Grain Board Takes Over Pool Wheat

Ottawa, Feb. 6 (AP).—The surplus of wheat for several years held in the name of the Western Wheat Pools has been taken over by the new grain board, W. D. Euler, head of the wheat committee of cabinet, said today.

When the government came to the support of the wheat market following the 1930 crop, the wheat pools were holding large stocks. Since then these stocks had continued to be shown in the books as pool wheat. The new board, it is learned, decided to take this surplus over, accepting losses on the basis of market prices on December 2, 1935.

Bell System Gains 57,000 Telephones

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. today announced that the Bell System in January showed an increase of 57,000 stations in service, compared with an increase of 30,100 during January, 1935.

Imports Increasing Faster Than Exports

Boston, Mass., Feb. 6.—December exports were the largest for any December since 1930, and passed the year previous by 31 per cent. But imports have gained faster than exports, so that the 1935 favorable balance of trade was less than half that in the previous year.

Crucible Steel Earns $5.07 Net on Preferred

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—Crucible Steel Co. of America reports for last year net profit of $1,268,176, equivalent to $5.07 a share on the 7 per cent preferred stock. In 1934 profits amounted to $735,157 or 30 cents a share on the preferred.

H. S. Wilkinson, chairman of the Crucible board, stated that the company's operating rate at the year end indicated profits at the rate of approximately $2,500,000 annually, which would be equal to $1.35 a share on the common stock. The company operated at 61.6 per cent of capacity during 1935 compared with 52.8 per cent in 1934.

Equitable Life Assets Rise to 1.8 Billions

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States had total assets of $1,816,170,000 at the end of 1935, a gain of $158,889,000 during the year, Thomas I. Parkinson, president, reported.

Outstanding insurance on December 31, 1935, totaled $6,226,286,000, an increase of $83,128,000 over the close of 1934.

Rocky Mountain Gold Sets Output Record

Denver, Feb. 6 (AP).—Gold production in the Rocky Mountain region in January—valued at $4,478,476—reached the highest monthly mark in many years, Mark A. Skinner, superintendent of the Denver mint, said today.

Gold Reserves Make First Dip In 16 Months

By the Associated Press.

The weekly condition statement of Federal Reserve Banks yesterday accompanied the American "monetary gold stock" entry with a minus sign for the first time in 16 months.

Net exports of $11,000,000 were shown to have occurred during the week ended February 7. This reversal of the flow was brought about during a two day period ended February 4 when, due to a strengthened franc, it was cheaper to export bullion than to ship exchange. As a result, $15,668,000 in gold left American shores. The week's average low, however, still saw a total of $10,168,000,000 reposing here.

Member bank reserve balances rose only $6,000,000 during the week. This was about $3,000,000,000 in excess of legal requirements. Money in circulation, due to the demand for month-end cash, rose $49,000,000.

Brokers' Loans Drop $4,000,000 in Week

Loans or securities to brokers and dealers held by weekly reporting member banks in New York City, were reported yesterday by the Federal Reserve banks to have totaled $4,000,000 for the week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $393,000,000.

London, Feb. 6.—Business slackened on the stock exchange today. Oils, industrials and transatlantic shares eased on profit-taking, but closed above the lowest for the day. Gilt-edged securities and arbitrage rails were supported and prices held firm, while other sections moved undecidedly. The closing was irregular.

Paris.—Trading was sluggish, but prices held firm on the bourse today as selling subsided. Rentes remained steady and industrially were mostly higher, while international issues moved irregularly. The closing tone was irregular.

Berlin.—The tone of the bourse was moderately hearty at the opening although the turnover was slightly higher. The market closed firm.

Mexicans in Search For Cuban Captors

Mexico City, Feb. 6 (AP).—Police searched today for the kidnapers of Eutimio Falla Bonet, Cuban millionaire, following the disclosure that $200,000 of the ransom money had been purchased by a local brokerage house.

Most of the money, it was reported, already has been distributed here and in Monterey, Guadalajara and other cities.

The newspaper Excelsior reported it had obtained information that exiled Cuban politicians were the "intellectual authors" of the kidnaping, which was perpetrated to obtain money for revolutoinary purposes.

The paper said the politicians brought the money from Cuba to Yucatan last October.

Falla Bonet, young Cuban millionaire, was kidnaped at Havana April 3, 1935, and held 12 hours in a house in the Vedado residential section. He was released after payment of $300,000 in American currency. Thirteen Leftist leaders were indicted for the kidnaping.

Negro Juror Serves In Arkansas Trial

Wynne, Ark., Feb. 6 (AP).—A Negro was serving on an Arkansas jury today for the first time since reconstruction days.

Joe Edwards, concrete mixer, was qualified as a juror in the murder trial of Andrew Hefley, Negro, accused of slaying his wife at Cherry Valley in 1932. The State is asking the death penalty.

Edwards' selection resulted from Circuit Judge Neil Killough upholding a contention of Hefley's counsel that the Negro was entitled to trial by a jury on which his race was represented.

New U. S. Submarine Is Damaged by Ice

Boston, Feb. 6 (AP).—The Navy's newest submarine, the Tarpon, not yet out of the builders' hands, went into drydock at East Boston today for repair of damages caused by ice at Provincetown.

Officials of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, Ltd., who operate the dock, said the damage had not yet been determined, but they reported the vessel's captain believed it slight. They said the ice apparently had damaged the Tarpon's diving rudders.

9 Zone Shifts Denied; Owners Given Leeway

Structural Changes Allowed in Special Permits by Commission.

Nine of 14 proposed changes in the zoning of properties were denied by the Zoning Commission yesterday. Two of the nine denials were alleviated by special permissions to make structural changes by owners of the buildings.

Changes approved by the commission were: From residential, 90-foot, C area, to first commercial, 60-foot, C area, 1643 Vermont avenue; from first commercial 60-foot, C, to residential, 60-foot, C, lot 55, abutting on the south side of Rhode Island avenue and to the north side of T street, between North Capitol and First street northwest; from residential 60, C, to first commercial, 60, C, 10 Seventh street northeast; from residential 40, A, to residential, 40, A restricted, the property bounded by proposed U street Branch and Alabama avenues.

The commission deferred judgment to make a similar change for a parcel at the juncture of Pennsylvania and Alabama avenues.

Change was approved for a lot on the east side of Seventh street northeast, between Franklin and Girard streets, from residential, 40, B, to first commercial, 40, C, with a proviso the owner shall seek a permit for three dwellings on the north side of the lot as well as a store.

The commission denied a proposal to change from residential, 40, B restricted, to first commercial, 40, C, 3401-03 Dent place northwest, but authorized enlargement of the store there, if no entrance was put on Dent place.

Scoffs at Kidnap Threat

VIRGINIA MALLORY PEYTON.

Girl Deprecates Kidnap Reports

Wellesley, Mass., Feb. 6 (AP).—A wealthy Wellesley College junior, Miss Virginia Mallory Peyton, 21, made light tonight of what she believed was a plot to kidnap her.

"I'm not afraid of anyone," asserted the pretty student, but a State trooper has guarded her since last week.

Miss Peyton, daughter of Mrs. Nathaniel Wagner, of Danbury, Conn., and granddaughter of William Mallory, a director of the Mallory hat company, said she was confident nothing would happen now.

Stockholders Of Continental Are Assessed

Justice Bailey Rules Million Due From 50 Owners of Trust Co. Stock.

Stockholders of the Continental Trust Co., which was absorbed by the now defunct Commercial National Bank many years ago, but which has always maintained its corporate identity, will have to pay an assessment of $1,000,000 on their holdings to meet liabilities of the Continental, Justice Jennings Bailey in the District Supreme Court ruled yesterday.

The stockholders, some 50 in number, had sought to avoid the assessment on the grounds the liabilities to be met through it were made up of loans allegedly unlawfully incurred by the bank to purchase stock in the Commercial. The purchases were for the purpose of furthering the then pending amalgamation of the two institutions, the proposition being that the Commercial should take over all the depositor liabilities of the Continental, leaving the latter with certain unliquidated claims.

To effectuate the merger, the shareholders said, the bank borrowed money from several financial institutions and with the borrowings bought Commercial stock. The purchases were illegal and unlawful, because the Continental's charter did not permit such activities, the shareholders said, and for that reason the present debts to other banks are not valid.

Casting aside this contention, Justice Bailey held that since the shareholders did not object at the time of the merger, they could not at this late date, raise the question. Money raised from the assessment will be used to liquidate Continental debts and claims.

Trade, Industry Fight Women's 40-Hour Week

Bill Would Raise Prices, Opponents Tell House Sub-Committee.

The Norton bill to provide a uniform 40-hour week for women employes encountered such opposition from local trade organizations yesterday at a House sub-committee hearing that subsequent hearings were scheduled for an indefinite time in the future.

The Washington Board of Trade and the Merchants and Manufacturers Association led the attack on the measure on the ground that it would prove costly to employers, would raise prices and constituted class legislation.

Representatives of local laundries and the National Woman's Party also expressed opposition.

Ringgold Hart, general counsel for the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, said that the merchants and tradesmen are unanimous in objecting to the bill, which would prevent any employer from requiring women employes to work more than 40 hours a week, or six days, or eight hours in one day.

Labor costs would be raised 16 2-3 per cent, Hart added, and even employes would suffer from wage reductions in loss of working time.

Scott Plans Oath Parody

become engaged or secretly married.

"I promise to remain in the dormitory, or on the school grounds, when not actively engaged in school or church work elsewhere.

"I promise not to encourage or tolerate the least familarity on the part of any of my boy pupils.

To Sleep 8 Hours.

"I promise to sleep at least eight hours each night, to eat carefully, to take every precaution to keep in the best of health and spirits, in order that I may better be able to render efficient service to my pupils.

"I promise to remember that I owe a duty to the townspeople who are paying me my wages, that I owe respect to the school board and to the superintendent who hired me, and that I shall consider myself at all times the willing servant of the school board and the townspeople, and that I shall cooperate with them to the limit of my ability, in any movement aimed at the betterment of the town, the pupils, or the school."

Scott, a holder of A. B. and M. A. degrees for his work in American history and economics and a teacher of ten years' experience, took the floor yesterday to answer Representative Blanton's statement of Wednesday that Scott is getting in "wild company."

Blanton meant that Scott is becoming associated with the House radical group, that includes Maverick (Democrat), of Texas, and Marcantonio (Republican), of New York. Scott said, however, that the statement might be misinterpreted by his constituents.

"And in would look bad for a school teacher to be accused of mixing with 'wild company' in the National Capital," he said.

Freshmen in House.

Only 32, Scott is still a freshman in the House, but he has already proved his ability in a rough-and-tumble fight, such as that which occurred last week, when he offered an amendment to the Interior Department appropriation bill, prohibiting the teaching of the principles of the American Liberty League in Indian schools. The amendment was patterned after the Blanton District rider.

Scott yesterday warned the House that it cannot afford to ignore red-baiting legislation, in the false belief that it will never be enacted.

Form of Persecution.

"You see what happened last year with regard to the District bill, because nobody outside the conferees knew what was going on," he said.

The same thing might happen, he warned, to put through the McCormick-Tydings anti-sedition bill, or bills requiring stringent teachers' oaths.

He labeled teachers' oaths as a form of "persecution of the teaching profession," and stated that he had never known a teacher who advocated overthrow of the United States Government, or the substitution of a set-up devised in Moscow.

"You can't make a patriot by passing a law," he said.

Then he recalled the story of the Confederate prisoner, who harped on the defeat of the Union troops at Bull Run until he was forced to take an oath supporting the Federal Constitution, to kiss the flag and call himself a Union man.

"The prisoner's first remark after this procedure," Scott said, "was, 'Didn't those Yankees lick hell out of us at Bull Run?'"
